SENATORS' COMMENT ON DAWES' SPEECH SHOWS RESENTMENT

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 4.

THE intensity and depth of the feeling aroused by Vice President Dawes' extraordinary inaugural speech today, in which he assaulted the existing rules of the Senate, may be deduced from the following comment, subsequently obtained from Senators:

Senator Robinson, Arkansas, Democratic leader in the Senate: "The ceremonies are necessarily formal. It is regrettable that they were made ridiculous."

Senator Smoot, Utah, one of the Republican leaders: "It is unfortunate that such a performance should have occurred, and particularly so because if there was any hope before for an improvement of the rules, it is dead now."

Senator Carraway, Democrat, Arkansas: "I have never heard a better example of what a speech should not be. The Vice President apparently is as lacking in knowledge of the rules and the Constitution as he is in good taste, almost but not quite."

Senator George, Democrat, Georgia: "Any chance of a change in the rules has been killed by the Vice President's brutal and clownish speech."

Senator Reed of Missouri (delivered with the profoundest sarcasm): "His melody of voice, grace of gesture and majesty of presence were exceeded only by his shrinking modesty."

Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska: "I have an opinion, and a strong one, but I don't care to express it."

Senator Ashurst, Democrat, Arizona: "It was the most acrobatic, gymnastic speech which I have ever seen on that particular rostrum."

Senator Bruce, Democrat, Maryland: "I am heartily in sympathy with the idea of revising the rules of the Senate in such a manner as to accelerate the transaction of business by it. Under existing conditions, half the proceedings on the floor of the Senate resolve themselves into mere display of human vanity. But I shall have to see a good deal more of Vice President Dawes before I express an opinion as to whether he possesses the skill and address to induce the Senate to break with its past. All I can say about him now is that he evidently is a 'character.'"

Senator Swanson (Dem.), Virginia: It is one of the great historic events of American life. I am sorry it was perverted into a farce.

Senator Goff (Rep.), West Virginia: I think it was a constructive speech, full of common sense.

Senator McKellar (Dem.), Tennessee: A deplorable performance. I am sorry.

Senator Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi: If I gave a statement of what I think, it would set your paper afire. What I have to say may be said on the floor of the Senate later.

Senator Oddie (Rep.), Nevada: ... virile speech, and ... is full of fight—... that the Senate ... necessary.

Senator Edwards (Dem.), New Jersey: Hell and Maria—and not much Maria.

Senator Willis (Rep.), Ohio: With regard to Vice President Dawes' speech, I want to say that I am on my way to the barber shop to get a haircut and shave.

Senator Ferris (Dem.), Michigan: I think that the Vice President has the lesson of his life coming to him. He has my profoundest sympathy. The rules of the Senate are hopeless. Improvement will have to be deferred to the next world.

Senator Brookhart (Rep.), Iowa: Well, nobody can call me "the wild man of the Senate" after this.

MANILA EMPLOYE OF ST. LOUIS FIRM 'SHORT $75,000'

WAS AN ASSOCIATE OF OSBORNE WOOD

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1925.

MANILA, March 4.—Sidney P. Schwartzkopf, a prominent attorney here, was arrested yesterday on charge involving the embezzlement of nearly $75,000 from the Fulton Iron Works of St. Louis, a large American manufacturer of sugar machinery, for whom he was attorney in the collection of notes from the Binalbagan Sugar Estate.

Schwartzkopf had been attorney for Governor-General Wood's son during the young man's meteoric business career in Manila. It is understood that he lost the Fulton Iron Works' money in bucketing Osborne Wood's stock market tips. It is also rumored that other trust funds are involved and it is possible that other complaints will be filed.

Came as Volunteer Soldier.

The attorney came to the Islands as a volunteer soldier. He was graduated with high honors in the one-year list of classes at the University of the Philippines. Later he obtained the highest marks at a bar examination. He was a member of the gay parties that Osborne Wood gave in Manila. He made a trip to Singapore on a cable request for counsel by Osborne Wood after the latter had left Manila for Europe. He has been prominent in the veteran organization and his wife is socially prominent. He also is a popular member of many clubs.

Schwartzkopf's bail was fixed at $5000 gold. A stipulation that he report daily was requested by the prosecutor who filed the complaints this morning after many delays, during which it is said the friends of the accused attorney endeavored to cover the alleged shortage. It is understood that he is completely unnerved. When hope vanished he went to the extremity of calling a family friend from Baguio, a summer resort 200 miles distant, to break the news.

Schwartzkopf Member of Law Firm Engaged to Collect Debt.

H. A. Osgood, vice president and comptroller of the Fulton Iron Works, said today that the company engaged the Manila law firm of which Schwartzkopf was a member to attempt collection of an old debt from a sugar mill concern in the Philippines. The debt had been charged off the company's books, but the lawyers succeeded in collecting about $15,000 on it, which was remitted to the company. Osgood said he did not know how much more had been collected, but that it appeared that a considerable sum had not been accounted for. He has cabled to the sales representative of the company in Manila for further details.

DYING FATHER NAMED SLAYER, SON TESTIFIES

John Rabbitt, 15, Witness Against Ben Tessmer at His Trial for Murder.

John Rabbitt celebrated his fifteenth birthday today by appearing as a surprise witness at the trial of Ben Tessmer, a police character, for the murder of his father, Nathaniel Rabbitt, proprietor of a saloon, grocery and oil filling station at Seventeenth street and Cass avenue.

A polite, reddish-haired lad in knickerbockers, John testified under oath that his dying father had named Tessmer as the man who shot him in the saloon at 7:30 a. m., Feb. 25, 1924. Tessmer disappeared on that date and was not arrested until last October.

John testified he had opened his father's filling station, obtained a cup of coffee at the saloon, then returned to the station. Tessmer and the bartender, George Damme, had been in the saloon and Tessmer had asked for Nathaniel Rabbitt.

Says Father Named Tessmer.

The son saw his father approach the saloon from the direction of his home, 1427 North Seventeenth street, and enter by a side door. A minute later the door was pushed open and his father, shot twice and fatally wounded, slumped out to the sidewalk. Then, said the witness, Damme and Tessmer emerged and Tessmer, after ordering Damme back in the saloon drove away in an automobile.

The following conversation ensued, the boy testified, when he crossed the street to his dying father:

"What's the matter, pop?"

"He got me, Jack, he got me."

"Who, pop?"

"Tessmer."

"Say an act of contrition, pop."

"I am."

The son then ran for a priest. Rabbitt died in a few hours.

Damme Mysteriously Missing.

Damme, who named Tessmer as the slayer, at the Coroner's inquest and before the grand jury, and was relied upon by the State as an important witness, has mysteriously disappeared. John Rabbitt said Damme was last seen July 6, 1924.

Rabbitt's widow followed her 15-year-old son on the witness stand. Tessmer was once married to her sister, she said. At the time of the shooting, she had seven children, but one has died since.

Missouri House Hears Inaugural.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 4.—The House heard over the radio today the inaugural ceremonies for President Coolidge at Washington. Three loudspeakers were placed in the House chamber for the purpose.

ONE SMILE IN THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

WASHINGTON, March 4.—ONE SENTENCE in the President's address as given out in advance was productive of much amused or startled comment. "The one great duty that stands out," it read, "requires us to use our enormous powers to trim the balance of the world."

The President meant, as shown by the context, that the United States should do its full duty toward stabilizing world affairs. It was easy to read the word "trim" as having another meaning.

FIRST LADY'S COSTUME OF "COOLIDGE GRAY"

Dress of President's Wife Is of Ensemble Effect; Mrs. Dawes Wears Blue Spring Suit.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—"Harding blue," the new shade brought out four years ago by Mrs. Harding, had its counterpart today in "Coolidge gray," the predominating tone of Mrs. Coolidge's costume for the inauguration ceremonies. The new color is known as moonstone, a shade deeper and warmer than pearl. The costume of Mrs. Coolidge was of ensemble effect, American-designed and American-made. The coat and lower portion of the gown was of a light woolen material, known as "Joseena cloth," somewhat of a cross between duvetyn and kasha.

The coat was embroidered in gray silk which in tracings with a thread of oxidized silver dropped from the shoulders to the hem of the garment and at the sides the broad line of the panel was at the bottom with points running upwards under the arms. With it was a collar of gray fox. The upper portion of the gown was of gray satin crepe.

Mrs. Coolidge's hat was of soft Milan straw, rather high crowned and small brimmed, trimmed across the top from side to side with a band of burnt goose. Her slippers were gray as well as her hose.

The costume of Mrs. Dawes was a black spring suit, with hat to match. Asked what shade of blue, Mrs. Dawes told friends:

"It's blue. Navy? Midnight? No—just blue."

RIDE TO CAPITOL GIVES WASHINGTON THRILL

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Coolidge provided a thrill for thousands of spectators when he made the historic ride from the White House to the Capitol. With the exception of the inaugural address this ceremony surpassed all others of the day in popular interest, as far as Washington itself was concerned.

Almost on schedule time the President, with Mrs. Coolidge and Senator Curtis of Kansas, majority floor leader of the Senate, left the White House shortly after 11 o'clock. The presidential party led a procession of automobiles containing the Vice President-elect and Mrs. Dawes, members of the Cabinet and the Inaugural Committee. A troop of cavalry from Fort Myer formed the military escort.

Hours before the scheduled time the sidewalks for blocks around the White House were filled with residents and visitors who wanted a glimpse of the President on his way to take the oath of office.

A few minutes before he made his appearance the roped-off lanes were jammed. When the President, accompanied by his party, stepped out on the front portico of the White House, only a slight stiffness in his bearing indicated that he thought this an unusual day. He paid no apparent attention to the 30 or 40 camera men who had climbed alongside the columns to take pictures. His lips were pressed a little tighter and he walked just a bit more upright than he usually does.

Mrs. Coolidge's Big Moment.

It was Mrs. Coolidge's great moment. Dressed in a gray, somewhat deeper than pearl, she seated herself with the President's assistance, in the waiting automobile, with the suppressed enthusiasm of a debutante going to her first party. Her eyes twinkled as she chatted gaily with Senator Curtis.

As the President emerged from the White House grounds to Pennsylvania avenue the waiting crowd gave a shout. Similar shouts greeted the procession all the way to the Capitol. Along the drive the President waved to the crowd and often smiled. Senator Curtis tipped his hat whenever the shouting and applauding became unusually strong. Mrs. Coolidge smiled.

Next to the President and Mrs. Coolidge in popular acclaim were Secretary of State Hughes and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who rode directly behind the vice-president.

CEREMONIES OF INAUGURATION TAKE PLACE IN IDEAL WEATHER

COUNTRY HEARS ADDRESS BY RADIO

President's Father and Mother-in-Law and Frank Stearns Are Among the Favored Ones.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Calvin Coolidge, the successor to the late President Harding, became today the President of the United States in his own right. He was inaugurated a little before 1 o'clock this afternoon, before a crowd that stretched away from the platform, on the east front of the Capitol, as far as the eye could see. Through the radio, millions of others heard the balanced sentences in which he continued an abstract discussion of the state of the union.

To the average Washingtonian the most engaging feature of all the ceremonies of inaugural day was the weather. Washington, remembering the blizzard in which President Taft took the oath of office and the unnumbered cases of pneumonia which followed that occasion, began a month ago to send up a prayer for fair weather. The prayer was abundantly answered. The weather was perfect.

There was just enough of crispness in the air to make overcoats comfortable. The sun smiled down serenly all through the parade and through the President's speech. So Washington, despite its earlier chagrin at the refusal of the President to approve a glittering, large-scale celebration, was happy.

"Coolidge luck" was on the lips of thousands as they got out of bed and looked outside this morning, and "Coolidge luck" continued to be the favorite phrase of the day.

Spectators Perched on Roofs.

There is no way of estimating the size of the great crowd that saw Calvin Coolidge come to the pinnacle of his good luck and his achievement. Pine benches to seat about 10,000 had been built for the occasion in front of the Capitol. They were all filled, and massed back of them were thousands upon thousands of persons, filling the broad Capitol plaza, spilling over into the streets nearby, and perched as to some of the more active of the throng, on the roofs of the Senate and House office buildings and even of the distant Congressional Library.

It made a fine picture, this crowd, with the sun shining down on it, and touching into brighter gayety the spring hats of the women. The crowd was very quiet and orderly as if aware of the dignity of the occasion and determined to live up to it.

It has been estimated that 50,000 persons came into the city for the inauguration. They were certainly all there, and it seems no exaggeration to say that Washington from its 450,000 inhabitants swelled the crowd in front of the Capitol to another 50,000.

Stearns Wears Contented Smile.

Anyway, it was a magnificent crowd and the President and Mrs. Coolidge and the father and mother-in-law of the President, who were in the family group on the speaker's platform, had every right to be proud and happy as they gazed down upon it. So also had Frank Stearns, the genial, kindly Boston merchant, who sat in the reserved seats just in front of the platform. Stearns has been the guide, philosopher and friend of the President at all stages of his

VICE PRESIDENT ASSERTS RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE ARE OVERLOOKED

DEMOCRATIC SIDE SHOWS AMUSEMENT

Senators, Almost Without an Exception, Greet Conclusion of "Hell and Maria" Address Silently.

The text of Vice President Dawes' address will be found on page 17.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Vice President Charles G. Dawes, in the inaugural speech which he delivered in the Senate Chamber today immediately after taking the oath of office, made a violent attack upon the rules of the Senate, and urged revision. The address, couched in severe language and uttered with great vehemence, caused a sensation in the chamber, and aroused profound resentment among Senators regardless of political lines.

The new presiding officer was vehemently critical of the rule which allows unlimited debate—a rule which is one of the Senate's most treasured prerogatives.

It is this rule, perhaps, more than any other, which distinguishes the procedure of the Senate from that of the House. It is the expression of the venerable Senate tradition that there can be no gagging of a Senator.

A storm of criticism by Senators, both Republican and Democratic, followed the ceremonies. It was broken by very, very few expressions of approval. Leaders on both sides of the chamber condemned the address as lacking in good taste, and as a flagrant invasion of the right of the Senate to make its own rules. They declared that the chamber had witnessed no such scene since the historic and disorderly appearance there of President Andrew Johnson.

"However natural," he said, "has been the evolution of the present rules, however commendable the desire that the individual rights of each Senator be respected, the fact remains that under them the rights of the American people have been overlooked."

The rule which he was attacking is that under which filibusters are conducted.

"Who would dare to contend," he thundered, shaking a wildly belligerent fist at the Senate, "that under the spirit of democratic government, the power to kill legislation * * * should during the last few days of a session, ever be in the hands of a minority, or perhaps one Senator?"

Chamber Sits Aghast.

As he launched into this startling attack, the chamber and galleries sat aghast, and the faces of the Senators themselves presented a picture of stupefied amazement. Then a titter began to ripple through the chamber. There was a handclap or two from the spectators' galleries. Senator Reed of Missouri burst into open laughter, and several others followed suit, including Borah. Most of them, however, when they recovered from their daze, were frigid, and there was no distinction between Democrats and Republicans.

During the Senate ceremonies President Coolidge sat directly in front of the Vice President's desk facing the chamber. As the speech proceeded with mounting tone and vigor, the President was visibly disturbed and the natural reddish tint of his countenance took on a deep hue and his fingers moved nervously. It was evident that he was not enjoying the performance.

Mrs. Coolidge, sitting in the President's gallery, covered her mouth with a discreet hand. Members of the diplomatic corps looked at each other questioningly, appearing to sense in the Arctic atmosphere that something unusual was happening.

Meanwhile Vice-President Dawes's vehemence was growing, both in tone gesture and the severity of his discourse.

"Who would dare oppose any change in the rules necessary to insure that the business of the nation always should be conducted in the interests of the nation?" he shouted. "The Constitution gives the Senate and the House the right to adopt their own rules for the conduct of business, but this does not excuse customs and rules which, under certain conditions might put the power of the Senate itself in the hands of individuals to be used for legislative barter."

He was winding up like a baseball pitcher, and fairly throwing his fist toward the grave gray-haired rows of Senators.

Gayety on Democratic Side.

Reed had buried his face in his hands and was giving way to uncontrollable laughter. The mirth of Senator Smith of South Carolina also echoed through the chamber, and there was general and unflattering gayety in the Democratic section of the House.

It was a "hell and Maria" speech, beyond a doubt—precisely the kind which Republican Senators and other friends of Dawes had been declaring he would never think of delivering in the Senate. The impact was heightened by the fact that few, if any copies had been given out in advance. It was perfectly obvious that it was a surprise to most of those who heard it.

It is difficult to describe the veneration in which the Senate holds its tradition of dignity, and to exactly that extent it is hard to describe the stupefaction occasioned by Dawes' manner and words. It was almost as if someone had walked into the Supreme Court chamber and lectured the Justices on court precedure, ending up by hurling a chemical bomb.

Rules a Gradual Evolution.

The rules of the Senate are the product of a gradual evolution which has continued since the foundation of the Government. Suggestions of alterations never come from persons other than Senators themselves, and even then are regarded with the utmost hostility, and are accepted only after the most profound and lengthy discussion of historical precedents.

The glacial faces and the grim silence with which Senators, with hardly an exception, greeted the conclusion of the speech, was a sufficient indication that stormy times are ahead for the new presiding officer. It is easy enough to heckle when one has the floors and when the heckled are under constraint to remain silent, but it was the unanimous opinion of those who have seen more of the Senate than Vice President Dawes has, that he had stored up immeasurable grief for himself. The Senate was plainly outraged; it is a formidable body, and it is not likely to forget.

The stage was set for a solemn and impressive occasion. In the front row, to the right of the Vice President's desk, were the members of the Cabinet. Immediately behind was the foreign diplomatic corps, gorgeous in gold braid and colors, the remainder of the seats on that side of the chamber were occupied by members of the House.

Almost immediately in front of the desk, on the Republican side, were ranged the members of the Supreme Court. By an irony, Chief Justice Taft was at Senator La Follette's desk, the Senator himself being in Bermuda. The Senate, Governors and other dignitaries filled up the remaining seats. Mrs. Coolidge, her mother, Mrs. Goodhue, and John Coolidge, the President's father, occupied the President's section of the gallery.

House Arrives in Body.

The House had arrived in a body, followed in turn by the diplomatic corps, the Cabinet, the chiefs of the army, navy and the marines, the Supreme Court and Vice President-elect Dawes. The official clock showed 11:58 when President Coolidge, escorted by the Committee on Arrangements, came in through the main door. As a matter of fact, it was about 12:15, but officially the Senate had to be adjourned at noon, so the clock was turned back. Dawes was sworn in by Senator Cummins, who has been the presiding officer of the Senate since Vice President Coolidge became President. Following a prayer by the chaplain, he immediately began his speech.

The swearing in of newly elected and re-elected Senators then proceeded. The atmosphere remained highly charged, but another shock was coming. From immemorial times it has been the custom to swear in four Senators at a time, and pursuing it the clerk called four names.

"Call them all up," commanded the Vice President, with an inclusive sweep of the arm and a scowling face. "Call them all at once." This time the laughter was tremendous, and the Senate, apparently seeing its inability to do anything now, joined.

Comment by Cummins.

The swearing in accomplished, he dismissed them with a mandatory wave of the hand which drew still another explosion of mirth and the entire assemblage adjourned to the plaza for the inauguration of the President.

As they moved to the chamber, an enthusiastic but apparently uninitiated spectator seized Senator Cummins' arm and exclaimed: "Great speech your successor made, wasn't it?" The venerable Senator turned a wry face. "I'm glad you liked it," was his dry response.

The Senate chamber bore an unwonted appearance this morning. The huge red leather-upholstered armchairs in which Senators grandly reclined on other occasions had been replaced by ordinary cane-bottomed ones, crowded closely together to afford all possible seating space for the impending ceremonies. The Senators, as if drawn by some communal impulse, packed themselves tightly together in the first two rows on the Republican side. With cutaway coats, braided vests and other extraordinary gear, they sat in stiff and shiny rows, like a boys' Sunday school class on Easter morning.

Party Lines Wiped Out.

Party lines faded out. Magnus Johnson, defeated Farmer-Laborite, a symbol of the shattered power of the La Follette bloc, rubbed knees with William Butler, Massachusetts millionaire, who managed the Coolidge campaign. Tom Heflin, the fiery Alabaman, was telling stories to Fernal Day, a rock-ribbed Republican from the rockbound coast of Maine. "Jim" Watson, Tory of the Tories, from Indian was laughing with Ashurst, the flame-breathing progressive Democrat from Arizona.

The transaction of business was perfuctory. A few joint resolutions, a few bills, mostly unimportant, that had come belated, from the House. It was all by unanimous consent. One objection could kill a measure as dead as a majority vote, so far as this session was concerned.

The "lame ducks" were having their last day. Two of them, Sterling of South Dakota and Bursum of New Mexico, were disposed to make the most of it, and were frequently on their feet. Ball of Delaware, chose the attitude of a school boy on the last day before vacation. Magnus Johnson kept his seat. The farm bloc made its last desperate and futile bid for agricultural relief yesterday. There is and will be no farm relief at this session. Diel of South Carolina and Walsh of Massachusetts, defeated for re-election, were not in the chamber. There are many who think that Walsh is almost certain to come back if he wants to.

Sensation Was Over.

The Coolidge landslide in Massachusetts caused his defeat by a narrow margin, and there will be another election in two years. It was obvious that the Senate felt that the sensation was over. There was immediate objection to any new measure. The holiday atmosphere prevailed. Even Senator Norris, that stern and conscience driven man from Nebraska, who fights to the last ditch and never knows when to quit, donned a weary smile and relaxed. The session had brought a great defeat and a great victory to him. His superb battle for public ownership of Muscle Shoals had been finally beaten after one of the most amazing uphill fights in Senate history, but he, in turn, had vanquished the Underwood bill to lease it to private interests.

Senator Cummins of Iowa, who has presided over the Senate since Vice-President Coolidge's elevation to the presidency by the death of President Harding, also was occupying the chair for the last time. He would soon give way to Vice-President Dawes. Cummins pounded for order, and even went to the extreme of ordering the Sergeant-at-Arms to enforce quiet and order in the chamber, but Senators merely laughed at this fierce command.

It was plain that they had put off the garment of responsibility, and when Watson presently moved that they adjourn until 11:30 o'clock, it was carried with a refreshing chorus of ayes.

President's Father and Mother-in-Law and Few Old Friends Are at White House—Mrs. Dawes Spends Busy Day

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The day before her husband's inauguration as President was a quiet one for Mrs. Coolidge. The routine of the White House is running on as usual. Col. John Coolidge, father of the President; Mrs. Andrew I. Goodhue, Mrs Coolidge's mother; Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Stearns, Mrs. R. B. Hills of Northampton, Mass., an old and close friend of the family, and Ralph Hemenway of Northampton the President's former law partner, are guests at the White House. Young John Coolidge comes from Amherst College for the day, returning immediately.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge went to hear "Aida" last night. This afternoon, after the inaugural ceremony and parade, they will receive the visiting Governors and a few close friends informally at the White House. They will not attend the charity ball which, as four years ago, is to take the place of the inaugural ball. It is to be a large affair at the Mayflower Hotel and does not fit in with the President's ideas as to an economical and unostentatious inauguration.

Busy Day for Mrs. Dawes.

The incoming second lady, however, spent a busy day. She saw women reporters in the Dawes suite at the Willard in the morning, saying she wanted their friendship as she entered her new position.

Mrs. Dawes will give no interviews and is not to be quoted, but she chatted freely with nearly a score of women writers for half an hour, during which time the discovery was made that Washington is to have a second lady who never wears an entirely sleeveless dress, no matter what the occasion, and who does not like the necks of her gowns cut very low.

The soft white crepe which she will wear to the charity ball is beaded with pearls and has a satin train, but its neck and little sleeves are more demure than those of the average debutante. The dress and matching long coat which she will wear during the inauguration ceremony are of a blue which is neither dark nor bright, and the hat will repeat the shade.

The gown in which she talked with reporters was the color of a dove's wing, with only a string of jade beads and a bit of jade at each ear to relieve the soberness.

To Take House in Washington.

The Vice President will take a house in Washington instead of living in a hotel. There are two reasons for this: their two adopted children, Dana, 12, and Virginia, 10. The Daweses will pass part of each year in Washington and part in Chicago. How to keep the children with them without interrupting their school work to a serious extent is a problem which not even the former director of the budget and the originator of the Dawes plan has yet been able to solve.

Meanwhile, Dana and Virginia are in high delight at their enforced vacation and all the interesting things that are happening. So too, are all the younger members of the Dawes clan, whom even close friends of the family declared themselves unable to enumerate.

Besides the Vice President and his wife and two children, the party includes Beeman and Henry Dawes, his brothers, and their families at the Willard; Rufus Dawes, another brother, and his family, at the Mayflower, and Mrs. F. W. Hoyt of Jacksonville, a sister. William Grant Eden, vice president of the Central Trust Co. of Illinois, Dawes' bank, and D. D. Muir, former president of the First National Bank of Lincoln, Neb., an old friend, also here.

Mrs. Dawes attended the Tuesday luncheon of the Senate ladies for the first time. This function was organized during the war and has been continued every Tuesday since then, always with the wife of the Vice President at its head. Mrs. Coolidge has continued to attend since Mr. Coolidge became President. At next Tuesday's luncheon Mrs. Dawes will be the new head.

Gov. Nellie Ross of Wyoming reached Washington yesterday. She will be the last Governor in line at the inauguration, Wyoming being the latest State admitted into the Union. She is staying with Mrs. J. B. Kendrick, wife of the Senator from Wyoming.

dential party. All the automobiles were open so the spectators could see the officials.

The ceremonies officially started at 10:22 o'clock, when Mr. and Mrs. Dawes, accompanied by the Inaugural Committee, left the Hotel Willard for the White House. Proceeded by motor cycle policemen and a troop of cavalry, they were given the first applause by the crowds, which lined the three blocks from the hotel to the executive mansion.

President Reaches the Capitol.

Accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge and attended by secret service men and his military and naval aids, gay in their full-dress uniforms, the President passed through the corridor in the rear of the Senate chamber at 11:20 o'clock and entered the President's room.

The stage had already been set for the transaction of the last business of the Harding-Coolidge administration. Pat McKenna, the doorkeeper at the White House executive offices, was there, and Rudolph Forster, the White House executive clerk, who has served through half a dozen administrations and knows more about the routine business of the White House than any other man, was ready with his batch of papers.

The President sat down at the same oval table, where four years ago Woodrow Wilson, broken in health, performed the last official duties of his eight years as President. Over the table was the same glittering chandelier, and reflecting the scene were the same mirrors that imaged the haggard face of the war President.

Recall Wilson-Lodge Meeting.

One recalled that historic meeting between Wilson and Lodge. When the Massachusetts Senator entered to ask if the President had further communications to make to the Senate, and the President, his head proudly high, fixed Lodge with a cold glare and bit off the words: "There is nothing further; good day."

One recalled, too, the painful, halting progress of Wilson down the short corridor from the elevator to the President's room. The contrast afforded by today's entrance of Mr. Coolidge was complete. He came a longer way, and quickly, like a man hurrying to his desk in the morning to start a day's work. His look was intensely grave. Mrs. Coolidge was smiling and chatting vivaciously, and the uniforms of the military men made splashes of color.

Around the door were Senators, new and old, awaiting a chance to go in and pay their respects. The corridor swarmed with Senators, military men, Ambassadors, notables of all degree. Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, was resplendent in red coat with gold lace. Chief Justice Taft was there, beaming and chuckling.

Mr. Coolidge Works Rapidly.

The President put on his horn-rimmed spectacles and got to work immediately. Forester took his stand at the President's left and sorted the pile of last-minute bills, handing them one by one to the President. The President worked rapidly. A quick glance at a bill, and it was signed, or laid aside. Apparently he was completely oblivious to of his surroundings. The crowd about him chatted. Curious faces peered in at the door. The President, head bent over the table, had ear only for the voice of the clerk and eye only for the papers.

At 5 minutes to 12 the President signed the legislative bill which carries the salary increase for members of Congress. There were sighs of relief all over the Capital when the news spread. To many a Congressman it was the biggest news of the whole inauguration day.

The President signed right up to 12 o'clock, when one administration ended and another began. Through it all he was probably the calmest man in Washington.

COOLIDGE REVIEWS PARADE AFTER HIS INAUGURATION

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—After President Coolidge conducted his inaugural address at 1:42 p. m. today he removed his glasses and shook hands with Senator Curtis. He picked up his hat, walked with Mrs. Coolidge to the back of the stand and then with Senator Curtis at his side and Mrs. Coolidge a step behind moved from the scene of another induction into office, the ninth in his life.

Immediately a signal was flashed to the waiting cavalry escort, which had been stationed during the ceremonies on the President's right, near the House office building and it proceeded back to the plaza to accompany him on the return trip to the White House. With drawn sabers the cavalrymen waited opposite the inaugural stand for the official party to again take its places in the line of motor cars.

Continuous Ovation.

The ride of the President along the avenue was accompanied by a continuous ovation. At first he was kept busy touching his hat in response and then he removed it entirely and waved it again in response to the cheering crowds. His features were wreathed with smiles, and Mrs. Coolidge, apparently very happy, smiled and bowed and waved her hand as she rode along to four more years as first lady of the land.

The Vice President, too, whose car was separated from that of the President by a color guard carrying the presidential flag, was given a rolling cheer as he passed.

The head of the parade, following much more slowly, swung around to the left entrance of the plaza at the Capitol grounds and had not yet reached Pennsylvania avenue at the foot of Capitol Hill when the presidential party reached the White House gate.

The military guards stopped at the gate, drew up at attention and saluted its commander in chief with a flourish of the bugles as he alighted from his automobile under the north portico and entered the White House. Mr. and Mrs. Dawes and members of the Cabinet followed the President and were his guests at a hasty luncheon, arranged to fit into the interim while the parade was making its way up the avenue.

There were numerous halts as the procession proceeded toward the White House, but the waiting crowds along the sidewalks did not thin appreciably. The weather was growing more pleasant and the sun brighter, and it seemed probable there would be no rain after all. The sunlight picked out sharply the brass buttons and bright accouterments of the troopers and foot soldiers who made up the head of the procession.

Coolidge Reviews Parade.

Before Major-General Hines, Chief of Staff of the Army and Grand Marshal of the parade, had reached Eleventh street in his march by easy stages along the avenue, the President and Mrs. Coolidge and their guests had finished luncheon and were ready to take their places in the reviewing stand. The offical party came out of the north door shortly before 2:30 p. m. and started down across the White House lawn. Half way to the stand, however, the President discovered that his father, his son and the Stearns family were missing, and he waited while a secret service man hurried back to find them. When they had joined the party, it proceeded.

As a precaution against unfavorable weather a special roofed-in glass inclosed compartment had been built in the stand for Mr. Coolidge and his immediate friends. It was located above the south sidewalk of Pennsylvania avenue, directly in front of the north entrance to the White House and facing the center of Lafayette Square. Larger unroofed stands flanked it on either side, and across the street on the edge of the square itself was strung out a still larger structure that seated several thousand.

The crowd was all there and waiting when the President came out. On the high platform from which the President spoke were members of Congress, the Cabinet and the Supreme Court. Just below the platform were the highly favored guests, like Stearns. In the rest of the seats were the other favored ones, whose political or social eminence had enabled them to procure tickets. And all around and behind those were the huge masses of the standing peoples. The front of the Capitol was gay with flags and green festoons. Rising from the speakers' platform were four white columns supporting a roof in which were cunningly concealed the voice amplifiers that would enable the President to be heard on the outermost edges of the throng. Down in front of the platform was a red-coated marine band.

The platform was built on the towering east steps of the Capitol and to reach it the President had to come but a short way, from the Senate chamber. He came out immediately after the inauguration of Gen. Lawes as Vice President. Mrs. Coolidge and Senator Curtis of Kansas, th chairman of the Arrangements Committee, were with him.

Wife Smiling, President Solemn.

Mrs. Coolidge was smiling. The President, as ever, looked solemn. Curtis, in his frock coat, had an unwonted air of formality and dignity.

There was a burst of polite applause when the President, accompanied by the Kansas Senator, advanced to the front to take the oath of office.

Awaiting him there was Chief Justice Taft, wearing a black robe and a black skull cap. The Chief Justice, standing at the President's right, turned and faced the President. Mr. Coolidge raised his right hand. The Chief Justice then intoned in a clear, vigorous voice the words of the oath. Would the President solemnly swear that he would faithfully execute the duties of the office? "I do," said the President.

William R. Stansberry, clerk of the Supreme Court, held up an open Bible and the President kissed it. The brief ceremony formed the gap between the Harding-Coolidge administration, between Calvin Coolidge, the successor of a dead man, and Calvin Coolidge the President by virture of a 7,000,000 plurality.

Inauguration Sets Precedent.

He was the first President ever to be sworn in by one who had preceded him in that office.

The President wore his overcoat which he kept on while speaking. He remained bareheaded throughout. He wore his glasses—the familiar horn-rimmed spectacles of his everyday wear—during the reading of his address.

The President read smoothly the 4000 words of his speech, departing but rarely and then slightly from the text as given out in advance to the newspapers. He began at 1 o'clock and finished in 41 minutes.

In no part of the speech did the President say anything about the occasion for its delivery. It was a general discussion of issues, a bringing together of various parts of the President's philosophy. He covered no ground that he had not traversed in previous public addresses. The address was heard attentively, but without any show of enthusiasm. Several of the President's points, notable his appeal for party regularity, evoked hand-clapping from the persons immediately about the platform—mostly a political crowd—but at no time was there general applause.

Scattered Applause During Address.

The first applause—a ripple—came when the President declared that Americans could best discharge their duty to the world by being "openly and candidly, intensely and scrupulously American." There was similar approval in about the same measure, for his reference to the duty imposed on this country by the "common brotherhood of man," and also there was mild applause for his championship of an adequate balanced military establishment.

With special force the President brought out his injunction to America to hold the lead it had taken in the peaceful settlement of disputes. He stretched out his right hand commandingly. The sentiment and the gesture were rewarded with scattered handclapping. Perhaps the most striking feature of the address was the President's renewed call for American participation in the Court of International Justice. He threw unusual emphasis into his words, and accompanied them with an imposing raising of his right hand. The crowd responded with a mild show of approval. It was noticed that the President did not change the words that had caused considerable amusement when he read in the advance copies. He said for all to hear that it was the great duty of the United States to "trim the balance of the world." The emphasis was so distributed as to convey the meaning that the President intended. The President's implied criticism of the La Follette progressives and their platform was punctuated throughout with handclapping by the crowd close to the platform.

Economy Plea Gets Big Hand.

What got the biggest hand, however, was the enunciation of his policy of economcy and reform of taxation. The idea that money ought to be saved was applauded several times, but there was no response to the declaration delivered with emphasis that the high taxes should be reduced. An oblique reference to the Volstead act contained in the President's exhortation to his countrymen to obey all the laws set off a little burst of handclapping. His plea for religious toleration was the signal for another small demonstration.

There was a ripple of applause through the audience as the President finished and turned away. As soon as he could leave the platform the President entered an automobile with Mrs. Coolidge and was whisked away to the White House, there to get a bite of luncheon before reviewing the inaugural parade. The President had a relieved look on his face as his car rolled away from the crowded plaza.

By the Associated Press.

Before 7:30 o'clock, while most of the White House circle was just bestirring itself from sleep, the President stepped out on the north portico of the mansion, tested the mellowing spring air, and then took around afoot out the northwest gate, past the stand where he later was to review his inaugural parade and the... back through the southwest gate to the executive offices.

To the secret service men, who were his sole companions during the walk, the President remarked that on every one of the other eight days when he took an oath of office the weather had been at its best. He added that he hoped it would not break a precedent today.

Soon after he re-entered the White House, Mrs. Coolidge and their guests were ready for breakfast and the party sat down in the state dining room to the usual buckwheat cakes, Vermont maple syrup and sausage. Frank Stearns, the President's friend, was missing from the breakfast table, having gone to the Union Station to meet John Coolidge, an Amherst student, who came into Washington among the last of the inaugural crowds that had gathered to see his father become chief executive for another four years. His train was due at 8:30 a. m., but Stearns found when ve Wife Much Money and Hired Many Servants for Various Residences, He Testifies.

OKES ON STAND ELLS OF WEDDING NFRIEND'S PARLOR

HOWS SCAR HE SAYS WIFE GAVE HIM

e Faces Jury With Only One Co-Defendant, Nugent and Negress Being Discharged.

The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 4.—W. E. D. Stokes, New York hotel owner, took the witness stand in his own defense this afternoon in his trial on a charge of conspiracy to defraud his estranged wife, Helen Elwood Stokes.

He went on the stand after he had been left to face the jury with only one co-defendant, Robert Lee, negro. Two other co-defendants, Daniel F. Nugent, New York attorney, and Hattie Johnson, negress, were discharged on motion of the prosecution.

The State objected to both dismissals, but Judge Gemmill urged the action and Milton D. Smith, assistant State's Attorneys in charge of the prosecution, agreed.

Asked If He Is Married.

Stokes answered questions in a clear voice, identifying himself as 54 years old, always a resident of New York.

He stumbled and hesitated to speak when asked: "Are you married?" Upon the third question on that point "you know whether you are married or not, don't you?" He replied that he "had been."

"I never was a lawyer," he said, contradicting one of the State's contentions. I started to study law but gave it up."

Asked when and where he first met Miss Helen Elwood, who became his second wife, he said: "I met her at the apartment of Mrs. Hendrix at my hotel, the Aansonia. When I responded to a complaint about the two ladies about the radiator. I was 50 years old; she was 26.

"They had two rooms and a bath. I am not sure whether the rent was $60 or $75 a month. Mrs. Stokes said she was staying with Mrs. Hendryxes."

Mr. Stokes took a minute or more to extract the years he had been married from his present age to arrive at his age when he met the then Miss Elwood.

Married in Friend's Parlor.

"I met her later in the hallway, and we discussed pictures," he continued in reply to questions.

"I once took her to a cafe to dinner. I think I had her and the Hendricks at my apartment two or three times."

As to their marriage, Stokes said: "I drove to the home of a friend in Jersey City, and we were married in his parlor. Then we went back to the Ansonia Hotel." He established a very elegant apartment in the hotel. I had 16 or 18 rooms and four or five baths, with picture galleries.

"I had a cook, a maid, a maid for Mrs. Stokes, a butler and other servants. I gave her a motor car, and an allowance of $500 a month for spending money and paid all the bills myself. I gave her considerable money when we were married.

"I had another home at North Long Branch, N. J., and a third at Covington, Ky. I opened the home at Long ranch after our marriage. I think the house had 20 odd or more rooms, all elegant and spacious.

"I employed three servants, and think an extra one came in when needed. I went down there Saturday afternoons or Friday afternoon.

"When her mother came, she went with one or both cars to Philadelphia, Hartford and elsewhere. I should say she spent half her time at North Long Branch."

Tells of Two Children.

Stokes answered a question regarding the time his wife spent away from home in 1912, the second year of their marriage, by replying to his attorney. "If you'd tell me that you were going to ask me that I could have given you an exact record."

The courtroom sat forward intensely when Stokes was asked: "Were any children born to yourself and Mrs. Stokes?" and replied: "Mrs. Stokes had a child born in 1914, and a second in 1915." "The first child was born at Denver, he said, and the second at the Hotel Vanderbilt, in New York." He said Mrs. Stokes moved to the Vanderbilt without his knowledge.

She said she couldn't sleep at the Ansonia," testified Stokes, "and went to be near the seashore."

Mr. Stokes said, over objection by the prosecution, that he loved the child and always had treated it well.

He said Mrs. Stokes spend most of the summer of 1917 at home with him. Attorney Rathbun asked.

She Changed Hotels.

"In 1916?" "Whether she went there then I don't remember. She returned from a trip in September with her father. She came in and said 'There is a question of whether we're legally married. I can't stay at the Ansonia until it's decided. "I must consult my father and my lawyer.' Then she went to the Biltmore."

"When I came to her apartment she had locked the door and she said she had engaged an apartment elsewhere at $25,000. I said I had incurred debts at the Ansonia, 'You have an elegant apartment.' With that she began to scratch my face."

"I have one of the scars today," said Stokes, pointing to his forehead.

Stokes studied the walls and ceiling before replying to questions that required him to fix dates and figures.

"Did you provide the apartment?" asked Rathbun. "No," was the response.

Stokes then recounted a visit of an attorney for Mrs. Stokes, who said she wanted a separation. The witness said he would not agree, and that he said he wanted to keep the children with him. He said he had not seen the children since 1919.

About Mrs. Stokes' Cousin.

Launching into a story of the events which, according to the defense, led to a reasonable suspicion and desire for investigation by Stokes, he said that once he found Mrs. Stokes in a dress of extreme dishabille talking with Hal Billig, a cousin of Mrs. Stokes, who was in a room across the corridor. He rebuked his wife, he testified, and she said: "I forgot."

He said that later Billig and Mrs. Stokes went out and remained until 2:30 a. m.

"After their return I went downstairs to her room, and she was undressing," said Stokes. "I said, 'Helen, I asked you to be back at 11, and here it is 2:30.'

"I went to the bathroom later. She had told me previously Hal Billig had gone to a hotel. I found her waving Billig into a closet. He started to run upstairs. She screamed, 'Hal, he's nailed the door at the end of that passage.' I chased him upstairs and down."

A Losing Race.

"Did you catch him?" asked Rathburn. "I did not," said Stokes.

"I said, 'Well, this is a pretty business'," continued Stokes. "I never spoke another word to Mrs. Stokes to this day."

Assistant State's Attorney Milton D. Smith strenuously objected when Stokes again starte dto testify regarding what his nurse had told him as to whisperings among the servants about Mrs. Stokes. The court permitted him to tell what his children's nurse had told him.

"She told me my wife had been untrue to me, and that Anna Brennan, Mrs. Stokes' maid, would tell me the same thing," said Stokes.

Judge Gemmill joined the hundred spectators in the courtroom in a hoary laugh when Stokes testified:

"The chauffeur, Mahoney, said he would guarantee me a divorce without court, Judge or jury, and I said 'Nothing doing.'"

Man's 107th Birthday Brings Town Celebration

Dr. Joseph Singer Halstead of Breckenridge, Mo., Receives Friends—Business Stops for 107 Seconds.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BRECKENRIDGE, Mo., March 4.—Dr. Joseph Singer Halstead, oldest of the pioneers of Western Missouri, today celebrated his 107th birthday while the town of Breckenridge joined in the observance of the occasion.

Propped up in bed amid a profusion of flowers, the aged physician held the withered hand of his 97-year-old wife, Mrs. Margaret H. Halstead, and smiled happily as friends and relatives called to offer their congratulations.

Born during the presidency of James Madison, Dr. Halstead opened the celebration of his birthday by listening over the radio to the inaugural address of Calvin Coolidge and what a surprise preceded it. It was the aged man's first experience with the radio and the first words that came from the instrument were expressions of congratulation addressed to him from a Kansas City broadcasting station, the Kansas City Star.

Business Stops for 107 Seconds.

During the morning Mayor E. E. Divinia of Breckenridge issued a proclamation calling upon the citizenry to observe the birthday of the old physician and in honor of the occasion business houses and the bank were closed for 107 seconds during the noon hour, one second for each year of the physician's life.

At 10 o'clock this morning the bell in the tower of the Methodist Church pealed out 107 strokes and a bouquet of 107 American Beauties, the offering of friends, was delivered to the doctor at the same hour. Later a delegation from the Breckenridge Masonic Lodge appeared with another huge bouquet. Dr. Halstead, as has been told, became a Master Mason in 1842 and is believed to be the oldest living member of the fraternity.

Altogether it was a delightful day for the old couple. Only one of their children, Mrs. R. E. Chaffin of Breckenridge, was able to be here today.

The other children live in various parts of the country. But they were all heard from during the day by wire or letter. The old doctor clasped his helpmeet's hand and smiled as the last message was read. "We have been very happy," he said feelingly. "We have been very happy, you and I."

M'CLINTOCK CASE INQUIRY RENEWED BY PROSECUTOR

New Witnesses Are Questioned in Death of "Millionaire Orphan" at Chicago.

JUSTICE OLSON ASSAILS SHEPHERD

Declares Youth's Foster Father Has Made Three Indirect Confessions of Moral Guilt.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 4.—After verbally flaying William D. Shepherd, foster-father and principal heir of William Nelson McClintock, "millionaire orphan," and charging that Shepherd had made three indirect confessions of moral guilt in connection with McClintocks' death of typhoid fever, Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal Court has carried his case to the State's Attorney's office after a Coroner's inquest had been continued to March 23.

Almost immediately the State's Attorney's office renewed its activities to determine whether the young millionaire died a natural death, and if not, who was responsible for his demise. Several witnesses who have not appeared before the Coroner's jury were summoned for questioning.

Shepherd Issues Statement.

Shepherd, who refused to testify before the Coroner's jury, issued a statement attacking the integrity of some of the witnesses who appeared before the jury, and also declared the entire investigation had been started by Judge Olson to prejudice the public against Shepherd in the contest of the McClintock will.

Young McClintock died Dec. 4 under conditions that led Judge Olson, a friend of the McClintock family, to the suspicion that he was inoculated with typhoid germs or some poison. He left a will drawn by Shepherd giving his entire estate to Shepherd, except for an $8000 annuity to Miss Isabelle Pope, his fiancee, who was waiting with a marriage license to wed him when he died. Judge Olson also asked that the deaths of McClintock's mother and of his own brother, Dr. Oscar Olson, be investigated, maintaining that both died under suspicious circumstances after contact with Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd.

As soon as the inquest had been continued, Judge Olson hurried to the State's Attorney's office, where he demanded the immediate presentation of evidence before the grand jury, "so as to return indictments as soon as possible."

New Witness Questioned.

The first witness brought to the State's Attorney's office for questioning was Fred Kutzbach, a baker, who said that he had been told by a friend of Miss Maria Gartner, a maid in the Shepherd home, that the girl had said she had been given some money and told to leave Chicago after signing young McClintock's will as a witness. Shortly after this witness had been questioned, it was learned that Dr. W. A. O'Brien, referred to by Judge Olson as a "star witness," had been taken into custody. He has been sought for several days and was said to have information about Shepherd's alleged application for a course in bacteriology.

Dr. O'Brien said that Dr. Fosberg had told him of talking with Shepherd about germs before Dr. Fosberg had been called to testify at the inquest. Several other witnesses were called in for questioning, mostly with regard to the statements attributed to Miss Gartner.

Miss Pope, McClintock's fiancee, who left here Feb. 23 for Los Angeles, is seriously ill at the home of friends in the coast city, according to word received here. She is said to be off the verge of a nervous breakdown, attributed in part to grief over the death of young McClintock and the strain of the long inquiry into his death.

IDENTITY OF MAN AFFLICTED WITH LOSS OF MEMORY SOUGHT

Superintendent William Stacy of the St. Clair County Home in Belleville is trying to establish the identity of a man brought to the institution two days ago whose memory is a complete blank. The man, about 53 years old, nearly 6 feet tall, weighting 180 pounds, with iron-gray hair, was brought to the home from East St. Louis. The only thing that might lead to his identification is a slip of paper bearing the name Conroy, which was found in a spectacle case in his pocket.

The man appeared at the office of Overseer of the Poor M. J. Sullivan in East St. Louis, two days ago and asked for aid. He could not remember his name nor where he came from or what his business is. He told Superintendent Stacy yesterday that the last he remembers is when he entered the Salvation Army Mission in East St. Louis last Saturday night.

The man was attired in fairly good clothes. The lapse of memory is so complete that the man's mind will not function on anything that happened at any time in his life prior to entering the Salvation Army Mission.

MRS. SHELP SAYS UNCLE REGISTERED HER AS MISS RUF

Her Testimony Is Supported by Introduction of Guest Book of Denver Hotel for 1918.

INTRODUCTIONS AS DAUGHTER DESCRIBED

Plaintiff Again Weeps as She Tells of Millionaire's Vigorous Objections to Her Marriage.

Mrs. Willard B. Shelp Jr. testified under cross-examination today at the trial of her suit before Circuit Judge Wurdeman at Clayton to establish her claim as an adopted daughter to a half share of the $2,500,000 estate of her uncle, Frank A. Ruf, patent medicine manufacturer.

Ruf's objection to her marriage was his sole reason for ignoring her in his will, which provides a life income from the estate for his widow, with 10 charitable institutions to receive the principal at her death, she testified. Her attorney has stated Ruf wanted her to marry another man, but she married Shelp in the face of threats to disinherit her.

"Beer Salesman" Epithet.

At the time of their engagement, Shelp was "selling Bevo" for Anheuser-Busch, the witness said, and in her presence Ruf had referred to Shelp as a "vulgar beer salesman." He is now vice president of the Dyas-Shelp Realty Co.

Remembrance of the "beer salesman" epithet caused Mrs. Shelp to sob. She motioned to her husband and he supplied her with a large white handkerchief, with which she dried her eyes. Subsequently she had similar use for the handkerchief.

She admitted writing a letter to Mrs. Ruf on Feb. 3, 1920, her marriage day, announcing she had "gone out" of Mrs. Ruf's life. The letter, written at Hotel Jefferson and addressed to Mrs. Ruf at Washington, D. C., was introduced by the defense. It follows:

Dear Auntie:

Inclosed please find check for articles purchased, being in absolute need of them before marrying. I wish always to remember I am grateful to you and your husband for all you have done for me.

I have gone absolutely out of your life, and trust you will be now happy. Am sorry to have broken my promise about waiting your return, but my husband refused, under the circumstances, to wait longer.

Most sincerely,

ALPHA HATCH SHELP.

Letters From Ruf Read.

A series of affectionate letters from Ruf to the plaintiff before her marriage were identified by her when the salutations were read. Some of the salutations were "My Dear Little Bib Gnral Nuisance," "My Dear Sweetheart Girl," "My Dearest Nig," "You Niggah" and "My Dear Nigger Voter."

Mrs. Shelp testified that her mother and brother told her when she filed suit that she had just cause for so doing. Later after conversations with Mrs. Ruf they changed about and are now opposing her, she said.

"Have you ever told anyone you were adopted?" she was asked.

"I don't think I ever used that term," she replied. "Everyone knew my status in the Ruf family."

Testimony that Ruf had introduced her to a photographer as his daughter and Mrs. Ruf had done the same to her modiste, was interspersed by the introduction of the register of the Brown Palace Hotel, Denver, for April 24, 1918. One line showed a registration of "Frank A. Ruf and wife, St. Louis, room 318" and the next line showed "Miss Alpha Ruf, ditto, 316." The hotel manager, C. H. Morse, and Mrs. Shelp testified Ruf had made both registrations.

Samuel Mitchell, of counsel for the defense, told reporters the defense, in an effort to show Mrs. Shelp was treated not as a daughter, but as a niece, will present three other nieces and three nephews as witnesses. These six, Mitchell said, enjoyed virtually the same position in Ruf's affections as did the plaintiff.

The witness showed emotion as she told of her courtship by Shelp. Their original engagement in the spring of 1919 was broken at Ruf's insistence, but they became re-engaged and on Thanksgiving day, 1919, she again informed Ruf she had accepted Shelp's proposal of marriage.

Weeps While Testifying.

"I knew my uncle had objected strenuously before," she testified, "but I thought that perhaps everything would be all right this time. When I told him, he broke into a tirade against him (Shelp) like he had so many times before. He said he was no good, that I was too young to know my own mind, that he was marrying me for my money and that I would be disinherited if I insisted on the engagement.

"I knelt before him and told him I was in love. Then"——

Here the witness wept. Shelp, who had been sitting near, cracking his fingers nervously, assisted her from the stand. A recess was declared.

Thereafter, continued the witness, when court reconvened. Ruf and his wife were cold and distant to her. Mrs. Ruf told her the marriage could be held at the Ruf residence, 5863 Cabanne avenue, but the Rufs would not attend. The wedding was set for Feb. 11, and late in January the Rufs departed for Washington, D. C.

Says Brother Opposed Marriage.

Eight days before the wedding date, her brother, Charles Hatch, appeared at the Ruf home. He opposed the marriage and "because of what he said" it was decided to have the marriage at once. The ceremony was performed across the street at the home of Mrs. F. C. Biddle, 5878 Cabanne avenue, with only Mrs. Biddle and the parents of Shelp attending.

The witness did not detail her brother's conversation, but her lawyer had previously quoted the brother as saying he had received $1000 to prevent the marriage and he would prevent it even if he had to carry his sister away. The donor of the $1000 was not named.

Three photographs of Mrs. Shelp and Ruf in affectionate poses were identified by the witness. One, in which she as an infant holding a milk bottle was seated on Ruf's lap had been enlarged by him and placed over his bed, she testified.

Tells of Life With Rufs.

The crowded courtroom listened attentively as she told of her life with the Rufs from 1910 to her marriage. In 1910 her father, C. S. Hatch, a Universalist minister and lawyer, died. On his deathbed, she testified, he told Ruf he did not want her to be under the "influence" of her mother and asked Ruf to "take her to your home and care for her as your child." Ruf consenting.

In a few weeks Mrs. Hatch, a sister of Mrs. Ruf, brought Alpha, the daughter, to St. Louis, and soon they were domiciled at the Ruf residence. From then until her marriage, except for a term at an Eastern school, she resided with the Rufs and was treated as their daughter, although not adopted in the legal sense, she said. Her mother remarried in 1915 and now lives at Buffalo.

Ruf, as pictured by her, was a kind, affectionate and fatherly man when sober, and profane and "hard to handle" when drinking. His "pet names" for her included "Babe," "Dade" and "Countess of Darkest Africa." The two whiled away evenings at home by playing dominoes and other games. One unusual game was that in which she sat on Huf's lap at the head of a staircase and they descended a step at a time for each story she told him. The staircase had many steps and sometimes it required an hour to reach the bottom, she recalled.

Says Ruf Called Her Daughter.

On her many tours over the United States with Mr. and Mrs. Ruf, Ruf introduced her as his daughter and so registered for her at hotels, she said, adding that when Ruf was told she resembled him he was happy and would say, "Why, of course she looks like me. I'm her own father."

Mrs. Shelp, who hardly looks her 26 years, is small, brown-eyed and pale of face. Her nervousness affected her voice, which broke now and then, and it extended to her husband, who cracked his fingers for relief. Mrs. Ruf, not at all nervous, sat by her attorneys, whispering advice and scribbling notes. Ever so often she would shake her head in dissent from Mrs. Shelp's testimony or throw back her head and laugh.

A suit to set aside Ruf's will, which had been filed in behalf of Mrs. Shelp in Circuit Court at St. Louis, was dismissed yesterday by Judge Calhoun, with her attorney consenting. The defense had demurred to the suit on the ground Mrs. Shelp was not mentioned in the will and therefore was incompetent to bring a will contest. If her suit at Clayton succeeds, the will will be set aside and she, as an established foster-daughter of Ruf, will receive half of his estate.

BORGLUM INDICTED ON THREE CHARGES

Deposed Stone Mountain Sculptor Accused of Larceny and Malicious Mischief.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 4.—Indictments charging larceny from the house, simple larceny and malicious mischief were returned against Gutzon Borglum, deposed sculptor of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial, by a De Kalb County grand jury today. Larceny from the house is a felony under the laws of Georgia. Two indictments were returned against J. C. Tucker, Borglum's superintendent of construction.

Tucker is charged with simple larceny and larceny from the house. Borglum is under $5000 bond to appear in Greensboro, N. C., Saturday, following his arrest last Saturday on a warrant charging malicious mischief, a misdemeanor. Tucker has not been arrested.

The warrant on which Borglum was arrested and upon which are based the indictments returned today, involve the destruction of models of Confederate figures to be used in the memorial and alleged removal of other models from the studio at Stone Mountain.

Borglum Says Doors Are Closed to Peaceful Settlement.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., March 4.—Gutzon Borglum, when told of the Atlanta indictments, said: "I will meet them on their own grounds. They have made a court matter of this thing now and they will have to carry it through the courts. They have closed the door to any diplomatic arrangement that might otherwise have been made. There is no opportunity to exercise the clause in our contract which provides for arbitration."

An information seeking the appointment of a guardian for Mrs. Pearl T. Johnson, widow of Walter A. Johnson, who left her an estate valued at $200,000 or more, was filed in Probate Court at Clayton late yesterday.

Probate Judge Hodgdon issued an order to show cause why the guardian should not be appointed, on which there will be a hearing March 10.

The information was filed by A. E. L. Gardner, an attorney, who said he represented members of the family. He would not say who these persons were, nor discuss the case. He said Mrs. Johnson resides "somewhere in the county," but asserted he did not know where. Her home had been at 14 Wydown terrace, Brentmbor, but later she made her home at Hotel Chase.

Deputy Sheriff William Wenom, of St. Louis County signed the affidavit which comprised the information. Gardner declared that Wenom was not directly concerned with the case, but had signed the document under a State law authorizing the Sheriff and Deputies to bring about guardianship proceedings.

Johnson, who died Jan. 28, 1924, was president of the Missouri Life and Accident Insurance Co. He made his widow his executrix without bond and left her the bulk of his estate.

Mrs. Johnson's attorney, Lon O. Hocker, would not discuss the case.

BAKER IN MESSAGE ADVOCATES THREE TAX INCREASES

Urges Two Per Cent Advance in Property Levy, 50 Per Cent More on Incomes.

FOR HIGHER TAX ON CORPORATIONS

Higher Rates Proposed to Get Revenue Up to Recommended Appropriations of $18,652,120.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 4.—An increase of 2 cents in the direct State property tax and increases of 50 per cent in both the State income tax and the State corporation franchise tax were recommended to the Legislature today by Gov. Baker as a means of providing additional revenue for the State institutions and departments during 1925 and 1926. The recommendations were made by the Governor in a special message delivered personally to a joint session of the House and Senate.

The Governor pointed out that the recommended appropriations for the biennial period were $18,652,120.25, while the estimated revenue available for the appropriations was only $15,409,530.98, or more than $3,000,000 short of the amount recommended to be appropriated. The appropriations of two years ago totaled approximately $18,000,000, and it is desired to make the 1925-26 appropriations virtually the same.

In addition to the tax increases, the Governor urged passage of the bill transferring the collection of the income tax from the State Auditor to the State Tax Commission, which it is estimated will yield $1,000,000 more revenue.

The three tax increases recommended are already before the Legislature in bills that have been reported favorably by committee. These three measures, the Governor estimated, with the income tax collection transfer bill, will produce $4,300,000 additional revenue for the next two years. After one-third of this amount is deducted for the schools as provided by law, however, he pointed out, there still will be a shortage of $674,888. To cover this shortage, the Governor pointed to two bills before the Legislature, one increasing the inheritance tax and one to make the Public Service Commission self-sustaining, which he estimated would produce about $500,000. He also referred to the administration consolidation bills before the assembly, which he estimated would effect a saving of $744,000 in the expense of operating the State government. These measures, he said, would more than offset the shortage.

Message in Part.

The message follows in part:

"The expense of government has been constantly increasing. Some of this cost has been in the interest of progress. Some of it can be eliminated. There are certain functions of government which create expense from which there is no escape. Our unfortunates in the eleemosynary institutions must be looked after and our educational institutions must be strengthened. It is natural to presume that the educational institutions and the eleemosynary institutions would cost more to maintain this year than last year, for progress means finding better and more efficient means of functioning. I have stated repeatedly that the tax question should not be a political question. It is a simple problem of mathematics in finding legitimate means for raising sufficient revenue to carry on the activities of the State in an efficient manner.

"I have no desire as Governor of the State to in any manner usurp the functions of the General Assembly, nor do I desire to appear in the role of a dictator. Feeling as I do, I have refrained thus far from making any specific suggestions. I do not wish to shirk any responsibility and now that I am firmly convinced that there will not be sufficient revenue under the existing laws to support our State institutions as they should be supported, I beg leave to make the following report to your honorable body. • • •

"The present administration started with a balance Jan. 1, 1925, of $1,421,520.98. The estimated revenue from existing laws for 1925 and 1926 will be $20,982,000, making a total of $22,403,530.98.

"One-third of this amount (for public schools), less the $1,421,520.98 (balance Jan. 1, 1925), is $6,944,000, leaving available for State expenses and institutions for 1925-1926 $15,409,530.98.

"Recommended appropriations by the State Tax Commission for 1925-1926 are $14,275,269.25. Additional appropriations by the Appropriation Committee which I believe in general not to be extravagant, are as follows: Penal institutions, $679,650; eleemosynary institutions, $619,700; educational institutions, $2,757,501; assessing and collecting revenue, $50,000; expense of assembly, $270,000, making a total of $18,652,120.25. Thus you will see that with the ad-

It dwarfs the downtown business district, stretching from the rear of the Post-Dispatch building down Olive street until its further extremity penetrates the Federal building between Eighth and Ninth streets.

In width, it extends from Olive street across Locust street into the block bounded on the north by St. Charles street.

It swallows up big structures like the Vandervoort store, the Syndicate Trust building, the City Club, the Town Club and 15 other business buildings.

Cahokia really is the heart of St. Louis. Its energy flows to the tips of the city's being, giving life to industry—and to the home, its cheapest, everyday commodity—electricity.

ditional recommendations by the Appropriation Committee that the total amount recommended for 1925-26 is $1,301,804.83 less than was available for the last biennial period.

"The total amount of estimated revenue under the existing laws, $15,409,530.98, is $3,242,590.25 less than the total recommendations made by the Appropriation Committee which, as stated above, is $18,652,120.25.

"Cheerful Payment a Duty."

"The question of how to raise this additional revenue has been one of considerable thought both by the members of the General Assembly and myself. No one wants to increase taxes. We know that the people have had many burdens to bear in recent years. But when we consider that the slight increase in taxes which we are recommending means so little to the individual citizen and yet means so much to the educational and eleemosynary institutions, it seems that it is the part of all citizens who love this State and are proud of what has been achieved in the past and are looking forward to greater advancement in the future to willingly rise to the occasion and pay this petty amount cheerfully. We must not recede one step from the splendid support that has been given these institutions, but it seems rather that we should do better by them from year to year. These are but the increasing demands of civilization. My recommendations to your honorable body then are that we raise this additional revenue of $3,242,590.25 by supporting the following measures.

"House bill 575, 50 per cent, increase in income tax, approximately $1,313,161.

"Senate bill 315, transfer income tax collections to Tax Commission, approximately $1,000,000."

$4,300,000 Additional.

The measures enumerated, the Governor estimated, make a total of $4,300,000 additional revenue.

"Apportioning one-third of this amount, $1,334,350.33, to the public schools, gives $2,568,700.67 additional general revenue. This amount added to $15,409,530.08, amount of estimated revenue, exclusive of one-third set aside for the public schools, gives a total of $17,977,231.65, which is still $674,888.60 less than the recommended total appropriations. But there are other measures already before your honorable body which will bring in additional revenue and curtail expenditures in sufficient amounts to offset this diference of $674,888.60.

"House bill 553, known as inheritance-tax amendment, ought to produce approximately $100,000, and house bill 567, public service bill, ought to produce $400,000. The proposed saving in expenditures from other bills, such as the agricultural consolidation bill, the industrial consolidation bill, the repeal of the special State aid to teacher training high schools and the repeal of the law requiring the State to pay part of the County Superintendent's salary and one or two other measures, bring the total saving to $744,300. This saving, together with the revenue on the inheritance-tax amendment and public service bill, will enable the State to take care of its financial obligations.

"I want to say in conclusion that it is the duty of all of us to make provisions for the adequate support of the State government. The present administration will save wherever it is possible to do so. I, as chief executive, make these recommendations, conscientiously feeling that it is adequately necessary that additional revenue be provided in order that the State might function to the highest degree of efficiency."

RAY RENARD TAKEN TO SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Appears Before Federal Grand Jury—Closely Guarded While in City.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 4.—Ray Renard, Egan gangster, now serving a seven-year sentence in a Federal penitentiary for an interstate freight theft, was brought secretly into Springfield today and produced before the Federal grand jury. The nature of Renard's testimony or his whereabouts was kept in greatest secrecy, inasmuch as authorities fear some of his former confederates are seeking his life.

Renard turned against his gangster friends and gave testimony at Quincy and in St. Louis which sent Dinty Colbeck, leader of the gang, and eight confederates, to Leavenworth penitentiary. It is understood that he was brought into Springfield last night and secreted in a private residence under heavy guard.

It was stated that the grand jury returned some indictments, but their contents were withheld pending execution of warrants. "Renard is in some danger and we do not care to take chances with those who desire to harm him," United States Attorney Williamson said.

COURT DENIES TWO WOMEN'S CLAIMS TO ABANDONED BOY

Philadelphia Judge, Unable to Decide Parentage, Places Child in Institution.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—Unable to decide the parentage of a 3-year-old boy found abandoned in Camden, N. J., last December and claimed by two women, Judge Raymond MacNeille in Juvenile Court today ordered the youngster turned over to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

The boy was claimed by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Steimling, formerly of Girard Manor, Pa., as their son, who disappeared last summer; and also by Mrs. Martha Silknitter, former laundress in the Western Temporary Home, this city, who told the authorities inability to support the child had caused her to abandon him in Camden.

In announcing his decision, Judge MacNeille said that while he desired to ward the boy to the Steimlings, as he considered Mrs. Silknitter unfit to have custody of a child, nevertheless the law prevented such action.

POLICE SEEK HUSBAND FOR ATTACK ON WIFE IN HOME

Woman With Probable Fracture of Skull Says He Hit Her With Vacuum Cleaner Handle.

Police are seeking George Stockamp, 37 years old, of 2840 Missouri avenue, on complaint of Mrs. Bartha Stockamp, 34, his wife, who was found at the home last night suffering from scalp wounds and a probable skull fracture due, she reported, to being struck with the handle of a vacuum cleaner by her husband.

She is under the care of physicians at home.

She told policemen when her husband came home at 7:45 p. m. he showed signs of having been drinking and she upbraided him. After the assault, she says, he left the house, got into his automobile and drove away.

GIRL HELD FOR CAFE HOLDUP

Memphis Police Say Prisoner Has Been Identified.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 4.—Arrested within two hours after she is said to have held up and robbed the cashier of a cafe here, Miss Marion King is in jail charged with robbery.

Held throughout the night on a vagrancy charge, the girl was identified, police said, as the stylishly dressed, masked young woman, who, at pistol point, held the cafe cashier and late diners at bay while she looted the cash drawer of nearly $200. Officers said the identification was made by several persons who were in the cafe when the robbery occurred. The girl denied having any connection with the holdup.

MOORE SUED FOR DIVORCE

A divorce suit against Robert E. Moore, Republican City Committeeman for the Sixteenth Ward, was filed yesterday by Mrs. Margaret A. Moore, 3545 Lafayette avenue, and given an immediate hearing by Circuit Judge Hartmann, who took the case under advisement.

Mrs. Moore said they married in September, 1914, and separated last September. Moore was cold and indifferent, frequently absenting himself from home, she alleged. Moore made no contest, merely entering appearance through an attorney.

Youth Injured When Pistol Bursts.

Arthur Huss, 13 years old, 7728 South Broadway, was wounded in the left hand when a blank cartridge revolver, loaded with a bullet, exploded as he fired it yesterday afternoon in the Missouri Pacific Railroad yards at Marceau street. The revolver belonged to his companion, Ralph Hoyt, 16, 7921 Van Buren street. Huss was taken to Alexian Brothers' Hospital, where he was given antitetanus serum.

SUES HUSBAND AND HIS FUR CLOAK MODEL

Mrs. Paul A. Kessler Asks for $10,000 in Alienation Action Against Woman.

A conquest by a fur cloak model of the affections of one of her married employers and the employer's capitulation to her charms to the tune of automobiles, jewelry, furs and other costly presents, are alleged in two suits filed in Circuit Court today by Mrs. Florence Kessler, wife of Paul A. Kessler, vice president of the Alex F. Kessler Fur and Hat Co., 509 Locust street.

One suit is against the former model, Miss Lillian Redell, of 3409A McKean avenue, and asks for $10,000 for the alleged alienation of Kessler's affections. The other is against the husband for separate maintenance.

While the alienation action alleges that Miss Redell engaged in her conquest, knowing that Kessler was a married man, and associated with him "publicly and brazenly," the other petition sets forth more of the details of the alleged association.

On Feb. 15, 1924, the petition states, Kessler filed suit for divorce. This was dismissed. Mrs. Kessler states, when depositions disclosed insufficient grounds for a decree.

Kessler's income was given as $400 a month, with $3000 a year additional in gifts from his father, Alex F. Kessler. The plaintiff asks that a reasonable allowance be granted her by the court for support of herself and one minor child. They were married in June, 1914, and separated Nov. 15, 1923.

Miss Redell could not be reached for a statement.

'BLUE FLEET' RUSHING NORTH FROM CANAL TO MEET 'BLACKS'

109 American War Crafts Open Spring Maneuvers in the Pacific.

By the Associated Press.

ABOARD U. S. S. SEATTLE, March 4.—The Black fleet, comprising American battle forces in the Pacific, some 51 war craft, is in battle cruising formation proceeding on its 2000-mile mission to capture a strategic operating base for attack on the Pacific coast. It is simulating a move by an enemy force against the United States from a base at Christmas Island in the mid-Pacific.

It is speeding toward an objective base while the protective forces in the United States, the scouting fleet, comprising 58 war craft, are dashing up from the Panama Canal to save the coast. That is the Blue fleet.

Destroyers are the scouts of the black fleet. These hornets of the sea in extended formation cruise in a semicircular line 25 miles ahead of the three divisions of battleships of the Black fleet. They are on the alert for submarines or cruiser scouts of the Blue fleet.

Ten miles astern of the leading destroyers is the flagship of the destroyer squadrons, the cruiser Omaha. Ten miles farther back is the defensive formation of the battleships, train of supply ships and aircraft squadrons, and the screening divisions of destroyers.

The great, gray, sleek sea fortresses, the nine dreadnaughts, are in three columns of divisions, the Commander in Chief's flagship, U. S. S. California, leading the central column, slightly ahead of the flanking columns, while the train of supply ships is in the convoy astern of the battleship formation.

Guard against submarine attack is maintained by divisions of destroyers, in formation all around the battle and supply groups. These destroyers move in weaving lines so that no matter from what direction a submarine might appear, a destroyer would be in position heading toward it to ram or torpedo it, or to speed toward it for attack with depth charges.

VERDICT OF ACCIDENT IN DEATH OF WOMAN, 74

Driver of Car That Struck Mrs. Anna Stuetterman Says She Stepped in Front of Machine.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned today in the case of Mrs. Anna Stuetterman, 74 years old, who died at St. John's Hospital yesterday of injuries suffered, Feb. 23, when she was struck at Hamilton and Minerva avenues by an automobile driven by Hobert Talbott, a switchman, of Overland Park.

Talbott testified he was driving on Hamilton avenue during a heavy rain at 5:45 a. m., when Mrs. Stuetterman apparently became confused while crossing the street and stepped in the path of his machine. Miss Mable Huth, 24 years old, granddaughter of Mrs. Stuetterman, testified that she and her grandmother were on their way to St. Barbara's Catholic Church, 1359 Hamilton avenue, when her grandmother was struck.

Mrs. Stuetterman, a widow, resided with her daughter, Mrs. George A. Huth, 1326A Temple avenue. Funeral services will be held Friday morning from St. Barbara's Church to Calvary Cemetery.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza, or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nauseless Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.

JEWISH TEMPLE HOLDUP HALTED BY POLICEMAN

ALL ESCAPE BUT ONE APPARENTLY IS SHOT

Patrolman Flatley Had Been Stationed to Guard Place Once Before Invaded by Highwaymen.

Temple Chesel Shel Emeth at 1260 North Euclid avenue was the scene of a running revolver fight between three masked robbers and a uniformed policeman at 11 o'clock last night.

The fight began in a second-floor room where the robbers, three young men with handkerchiefs tied across their faces, tried to "stick up" a meeting of the Legal Loan and Investment Co., composed of members of the congregation, where about $1000 cash had been collected. They were routed by Patrolman John Flatley of Deer Street District, detailed there for just such an occurrence because the organization had been robbed before.

In the scuffle, a chair was smashed over the head of one robber, and the three fled downstairs, pursued by the policeman, and escaped. Flatley is certain he wounded one man, who stumbled and fell on the sidewalk, losing a loaded .32-caliber revolver in his haste to get away.

Entered by a Side Door.

Patrolman Flatley did not see the robbers enter. He was in the main hall watching one door when the robbers ascended a stairway and entered the meeting room by a side door.

S. Barney Spitzer of 5950 Plymouth avenue, secretary of the company, told a Post-Dispatch reporter of the robbery today. "We were just about ready to quit and go home when the door opened and someone said, 'stick 'em up, quick,'" Spitzer said. "We obeyed. One man stayed by the door with a revolver, while another walked straight to my desk and opened the drawer where I had placed about $1000 cash. Then the officer opened the door and somebody said, 'Police.'

"Everything was confusion then. The man at the door fired two shots at the policeman and ran out. Somebody picked up a chair and banged it down on the head of the man at the desk. He threw it off and backed to the door of an adjoining room with the other fellow, who shook a revolver at us and shouted, 'Keep 'em up; keep 'em up.' The policeman fired a shot, and the two men ran through the other room, into the hall and downstairs."

One Apparently Wounded.

Patrolman Flatley said he fired four shots at the robbers, and they fired as many at him. On the street, he said, one robber fell down and groaned, and then leaped to his feet and ran east on Page boulevard into the darkness.

In the meeting room were Frank Weinstein, president of the company, a private enterprise not connected with church business; H. Wallace, treasurer; Morris Steinbaum, S. Ginsberg, and Spitzer.

On May 3, 1922, three robbers invaded the temple and took $150 from officers of a burial society meeting in a first-floor room. On May 8, last, Weinstein was robbed of $240 of the organization's money by a man who entered his tailor shop at 4953 Delmar boulevard. Because of these robberies, a patrolman is provided to guard each meeting.

KING GEORGE SITS UP, PREPARES FOR SEA VOYAGE

Prince George and Prince Henry Return From Country Cured of Their Ailments.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 4.—King George yesterday sat up in his bedroom. He did not venture out of doors as the weather was damp and windy. Two of the King's sons who have been ill, Prince George with tonsilitis and Prince Henry with a bad cold, came back to the palace today from the country cured of their ailments.

The ever-healthy Prince of Wales called at the palace to see the members of the royal family, all of whom were under the one roof, except the Duke of York. Princess Mary, who has been staying at the palace during her father's illness, will return to her Yorkshire home tomorrow, all anxiety over the state of the health of the King and the two Princes having been dissipated.

The commander of the royal yacht is coming to London today to receive final instructions regarding the voyage of King George to the Mediterranean.

BERLIN STREETS ARE THRONGED AT EBERT'S FUNERAL

German Capital Pays Its Last Tribute to the Late President of the Republic.

CHANCELLOR LUTHER DELIVERS ORATION

Services Held in Front of Reichstag Building Following Ceremony in Executive Mansion.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 4.—The German capital today bade farewell to Friedrich Ebert, first president of the republic, whose body will go by special train tonight to his boyhood home at Heidelberg, where it will lie beside that of his mother in the Berg Cemetery.

The funeral services in the executive mansion, attended by about 250 high officials and diplomats, began at 3 o'clock this afternoon, with Acting President Luther as the orator and music by the chorus and orchestra of the State Opera. The body was taken at 4 o'clock under military escort to the front of the Reichstag building, where President Loeb of the legislative body delivered a eulogy.

The procession, composed of an escort of only a company of cavalry, three infantry regiments, a battery and a few policemen, then moved to the Potsdamer station, where the coffin was placed on a high catafalque so the public might have an opportunity to pay its respects.

Many Spectators.

Many spectators were unable to find space in the great circle before the Reichstag building, where Loeb delivered the funeral address. Large crowds gathered near the Potsdam railway station, before which the body lay in state for an hour prior to leaving for Heildenberg.

Services in the executive mansion were brief, opening with the funeral march from Beethoven's "Eroica" by the orchestra of the State Opera. The State Opera chorus then sang the Seventy-fifth Psalm. Chancellor Luther delivered the funeral oration and after the singing of Weber's funeral song the body was removed from the mansion and the funeral procession started for the Reichstag.

Chancellor Luther began his oration in the late President's honor with a feeling tribute to Frau Ebert, whose devoted companionship had such a marked influence upon the success of the late executive's career. Dr. Luther traced Herr Ebert's course during the war, throughout which, said the Chancellor, he consistently upheld the honor of the nation and sacrificed his two sons. Dr. Luther also alluded to the executive's personal efforts in the revolutionary period which resulted in the calling of a national assembly within two months, through which chaos was averted.

Efforts Toward Unity.

Dr. Luther briefly sketched the presidential term, referring especially to the executive's efforts to establish national unity.

"He always approved my demands, repeatedly proclaimed in recent speeches, that the inevitable opposition in parliamentary life must not bring about a rift in the body politic but must be a loyal and constructive opposition."

The Wilhelmstrasse was turned into an avenue of mourning for the funeral. Great black obelisks have been erected at the Wilhemplatz entrance and the Unter Den Linden entrance to the official section of the avenue where the homes of the President, Chancellor and the foreign office stand.

The street lighting fixtures have been hung with evergreen wreaths tied with black crepe. Similar decorations were installed along the entire line of the funeral procession. The Reichstag building also was festooned with black and the colors of the Republic—red, gold and black.

All the state and city bureaus, together with the schools, closed at 1 o'clock. Traffic was suspended entirely along the route of the funeral procession.

The Socialist party announces the raising of an Ebert memorial fund, which will be devoted to affording high or specialized education to young men of unusual talent from the workers' class.

Special trains arrived in Berlin early in the morning, and before noon the streets designated as the route for the funeral procession were jammed. It was a beautiful sunshiny day — Hohenshollern, many members of the crowds remarked laconically—for it was a tradition that the deposed house always had pleasant weather for all public ceremonies.

INTEREST IN AUTO SHOW CONTINUES KEEN

Total Attendance of 16,620 Yesterday—Visitors Studying Features of Various Cars.

Public interest in the automobile show continued keen yesterday, about 5000 persons visiting it in the afternoon, while the total attendance for the day was 16,620. Dealers generally commented on the large proportion of visitors who evidently were actively interested in cars. The tenor of public comment was indicated by Matt F. Morse, manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, who said yesterday afternoon that he had seen all the important shows, but that this St. Louis event was the finest and most interesting of the year. The diverse showing of models, the innovations in body design and engineering features in virtually every make of car, attract much attention.

As at the fall closed car show, the coach and the increasing number of them are one of the principal exhibition features. Coaches are everywhere in the show—Buick, Dodge, Hudson, Essex, Oakland, Oldsmobile, Cleveland, Velie, Chandler, Chevrolet, Star, even Cadillac—and a Durant coach is coming. A number of other cars really are coaches, but go by other names.

There is much interest in the bus exhibit. The type of Reo bus that is running on several lines out of St. Louis is illustrated by one which has been sold for making a second daily trip over the St. Louis-Farmington, Mo., bus route. A Mason Road King bus which is exhibited has been sold to another bus line out of this city.

Air Cleaners Demonstrated.

There is so much to see at the show that picking out individual features for emphasis is difficult. However, there probably is no engineering innovation that means more to long car life than the air cleaners which are standard on such cars as the Chrysler, Rickenbacker, Jordan, Hup eight, Franklin and others. The device employed by Hup engineers saves space and materials. The cover plates for the valve compartments on the side of the engine have louvres similar to those in automobile hoods. A short pipe runs from this compartment to the carburetor, the idea being to use air that has turned back through the louvres. Dirt, being heavier than air, does not turn back with it through the louvres. Other air cleaners generally depend on centriffugal force to expell dirt from air sucked into the engine.

Every day sees changes in the exhibits as distributers who have a wide variety of models desire to put them all on display before the show ends.

There is keen competition among salesmen at the show for the prizes of $100, $50 and $25 offered by the show committee for largest cash sales. Sales at the show are running unusually good, and this is attributed to the fact that as complimentary tickets were barred, there is not the jam that in the past has prevented salesmen from devoting sufficient time to individual visitors.

Auburn Dealers Entertained.

The new Auburn 4-cylinder car, which is to supplement the Auburn "straight eight" and six, is to be in production by spring, J. I. Farley, president of the Auburn Automobile Co., said yesterday at a meeting of Auburn dealers as guests of the Mound City Automobile Co. He explained that an Auburn four, modeled after European designs, was exhibited at the New York show, but was withdrawn for redesigning at the instance of distributors who believed that lines more certain to become popular could be chosen. Joseph A. Schlecht, president of the Mound City company, presided at the meeting.

Hup dealers met today at the Hotel Claridge as guests of the Weber Implement and Automobile Co. Maxwell-Chrysler dealers were guests of G. N. Berry, Inc., at the same hotel.

Tomorrow Buick dealers will meet at Hotel Statler, Studebaker dealers at the Missouri Athletic Association, and Olds dealers at the Marquette Hotel.

Auto Luggage Display.

George V. Steffens & Co. have taken permanent quarters on the Pine street side of the Eighteenth street Garage, in which the show is being held. The company manufactures leather and metal automobile luggage and imports luggage and automoive novelties.

Hugh Higginbottam, supervisor of the Oakland Motor Car Co., visited the show yesterday.

TWO $100 BILLS WON SCHNEIDERS' CREDIT

Bankrupt Radio Concern Head Tells How Ex-Convict Displayed Money on First Visit.

Edgar Schneiders, 60-year-old ex-convict, at liberty on bond pending prosecution on charges of obtaining money by false pretense, planked down two $100 bills on the occasion of his first purchase from the St. Louis Radio Service Co., now bankrupt, and so impressed Roy H. Browning, 21-year-old head of the concern, that the North American Sales Co., which Schneiders operated, was favored with extended credit. So Browning testified before Bankruptcy Referee Coles yesterday.

"Schneiders came to my store at 1211 Hodiamont avenue, dropped two $100 bils on the counter, and said he wanted that much radio equipment," Browning testified. "I thought fate had sent us an excellent customer. Schneiders continued to visit the store and make cash purchases for several months, so naturally I thought I was safe in extending him credit.

"I had a lot of confidence in that man. I let him have a lot of stuff on credit and then he presented a check for $1400, which he had received in Chicago, and asked that I give him $800 on it and credit his account with the balance. I did as requested and then the man in Chicago refused to pay the check, and I was out both cash and radio sets. About that time I read that Schneiders had got into other trouble and he never came around and I never could get to see him."

Peck Also Got Credit.

Browning testified he also had extended credit to Robert Peck, a former stock broker, who was associated in Schneiders' enterprises. "Peck at first said he was operating the Springfield Manufacturing Co., makers of radio parts," Browning testified. "I let him have some equipment on credit, but I doubt if anyone will ever be able to collect anything from him. I couldn't."

Schneiders gained his freedom from prison in 1919 after serving 19 months of a two-year term for forgery. Since then it has been estimated he directed the sale of $500,000 in promissory notes. Givers of the notes frequently charged fraud, and three warrants were issued against Schneiders last August on the complaint of three men who invested $28,000 in promissory notes. Peck, a former stock broker, escaped going to prison when the State Supreme Court reversed a two-year sentence for embezzlement from a client. He announced recently that he had discontinued operations with Schneiders.

Browning's brief experience in making and selling radio equipment will probably cost his family and creditors approximately $10,000. He started in business a year ago with $7500 in merchandise and cash and no debts. His company now owes $6100, against which are assets of doubtful value.

Missouri U. Graduate.

He is a graduate of the electrical engineering department at Missouri University. In explaining another liability, he told Referee Coles of a transaction in which an automobile and a radio set were involved, neither of which was in his possession at the time of bankruptcy.

"I had a salesman working for me who said he needed an automobile in order to get around to the trade," Browning testified. "I did not have the money to buy a car for him, so he scouted around and arranged a deal with a used car dealer, who I understood was willing to trade an automobile for a radio set. We turned over the radio and had the car about 30 days, and then the automobile man said there were notes due on the car and took it back. He has my radio set, too."

"Are you sure the transaction did not call for a sum of money in addition to the radio?" Referee Coles asked.

"I'm not positive," Browning answered. "The transaction was between my salesman and the auto dealer. They told me it was an even trade and I had confidence in them."

"The trouble with you seems to have been that you had too much faith in the integrity of others," the referee interposed.

$1,225,000 FOR ROBERT BROOKINGS GRADUATE SCHOOL

St. Louisan Obtains Large Contributions for Institution That Will Absorb Research Institute in Washington.

HE GAVE BUILDINGS AND EQUIPMENT

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Within the last two months, Robert S. Brookings, St. Louis philanthropist and educator, has obtained pledges of $1,225,000 for the Robert Brookings Graduate School of Economic and Government in Washington, and has personally contributed buildings and equipment worth $200,000 and securities that will bring in $45,000 annually.

Brookings said today that the Laura Spelman-Rockefeller Memorial Foundation, through efforts of John D. Rockefeller Jr., had consented to give $75,000 a year to the school for seven years, for the creation of a research department. To meet this requirement, the Institute of Government Research, an affiliated organization of which Brookings is president, will become a department of the school.

This reorganization will be effected at a joint board meeting in New York, Monday. The members of the Institute Board will resign and become members of the graduate school Board of Trustees.

Eastman a Large Contributor.

The other large contributor is George Eastman, president of the Eastman Kodak Co. Late last December Eastman undertook to give the school $50,000 a year for seven years.

The third contribution—$350,000 for any additions Dr. Brookings might want to make to the school—came from "a friend." For the last three years the Carnegie Foundation has been giving $200,000 a year to the Institute of Economics, also an affiliated organization. This sum will continue to be given yearly for the next seven years, in addition to the donations just announced.

"Long before these seven years have expired, we believe the school will be permanently and richly endowed, and all the activities of the institutes will be functioning under one head," Brookings said.

All the gifts of Brookings have taken the form of buildings, equipment and permanent endowments. Within the last year he has given an office building at 26 Jackson place, within half a block of the White House, to the Institute of Economics. This building is now valued at $400,000.

Brookings is president of the boards of the Graduate School, the Institute of Government Research and the Institute of Economics. The Graduate School was originally founded as a branch of Washington University, St. Louis. At that time one year's residence was required in St. Louis and one year in Washington. Last year the curriculum was changed and two years' residence in Washington was required.

For administrative purposes it was recently found expedient, Brookings said, to separate the school from Washington University, although close relations between the two are still maintained.

All in Research Work.

All the Brookings organizations are engaged in research work. The Institute of Government Research was the first. Its purpose was to supply Government officials and any citizen who might be interested, with information regarding non-controversial problems in American Government. This body supplied Congress with a great deal of information regarding the budget question and helped materially in framing the present Good-McCormick budget law. It employs a group of experts who work on data available in Government departments and commission.

The Institute of Economics has a group of experts who devote their time to more controversial topics in government, specializing in such subjects as the tariff, capital and labor, and taxation.

The Graduate School has for its specific purpose the training of students for public service. For matriculation it requires a master's degree or its equivalent. The students read for the degree of doctor of philosophy.

Experts of the two institutes lecture in the Graduate School, and students of the school work in the institutes. All the student work is along practical economic and research lines, and is published by one of the institutes when completed.

As a result of the new contributions, the three organizations will have a combined income of $370,000 annually. Through the gifts of Brookings, all the buildings and equipment now belong to the school or the institutes.

Give the new mintrated kind. It's a joy to take besides multiplying benefits of ordinary milk of magnesia

MOTHER: Here is the new kind of milk of magnesia that doctors now are urging in place of old kinds, for children and for you.

It's minty, cool and inviting; none of that chalky after-taste. You know what this will mean to the youngsters. They take it without a murmur.

But of greatest scientific importance, it expels stomach gases as well as relieving acidity, indigestion, constipation, headaches, etc. That doubles its effects, for ordinary magnesias failed in that gas expulsion. Worst cases of stomach gas now go in 15 minutes. You'll call it wonderful.

It's called MINTRATED CREAM OF MAGNESIA. A world-famed laboratory makes it. Great physicians are employing it. To you and your children, it will mean much. Clip the coupon before you forget.

Executive Declares Policy That Stands Out as Result of Election Is Economy With Tax Reduction and Reform.

My Countrymen: No one can contemplate current conditions without finding much that is satisfying and still more that is encouraging. Our own country is leading the world in the general readjustment to the results of the great conflict. Many of its burdens will bear heavily upon us for years, and the secondary and indirect effects we must expect to experience for some time. But we are beginning to comprehend more definitely what course should be pursued, what remedies ought to be applied, what actions should be taken for our deliverance, and are clearly manifesting a determined will faithfully and conscientiously to adopt these methods of relief. Already we have sufficiently rearranged our domestic affairs so that confidence has returned, business has revived, and we appear to be entering an era of prosperity which is gradually reaching into every part of the nation. Realizing that we cannot live unto ourselves alone, we have contributed of our resources and our counsel to the relief of the suffering and the settlement of the disputes among the European nations. Because of what America is and what America has done, a firmer courage, a higher hope, inspires the heart of all humanity.

These results have not occurred by mere chance. They have been secured by a constant and enlightened effort marked by many sacrifices and extending over many generations. We cannot continue these brilliant successes in the future, unless we continue to learn from the past. It is necessary to keep the former experiences of our country both at home and abroad continually before us, if we are to have any science of government. If we wish to erect new structures, we must have a definite knowledge of the old foundations. We must realize that human nature is about the most constant thing in the universe and that the essentials of human relationship do not change. We must frequently take our bearings from these fixed stars of our political firmament if we expect to hold a true course. If we examine carefully what we have done, we can determine the more accurately what we can do.

We stand at the opening of the one hundred and fiftieth year since our national consciousness first asserted itself by unmistakable action with an array of force. The old sentiment of detached and dependent colonies disappeared in the new sentiment of a united and independent nation. Men began to discard the narrow confines of a local charter for the broader opportunities of a national constitution. Under the eternal urge of freedom we became an independent nation. A little less than 50 years later that freedom and independence were reasserted in the face of all the world, and guarded, supported and secured by the Monroe doctrine. The narrow fringe of States along the Atlantic seaboard advanced its frontiers across the hills and plains of an intervening continent until it passed down the golden slope to the Pacific. We added freedom a birthright. We extended our domain over distant islands in order to safeguard our own interests and accepted the consequent obligation to bestow justice and liberty upon less favored peoples. In the defense of our own ideals and in the general cause of liberty we entered the Great War. When victory had been fully secured, we withdrew to our own shores unrecompensed save in the consciousness of duty done.

Propose to Be More and More American."

Throughout all these experiences we have enlarged our freedom, we have strengthened our independence. We have been, and propose to be, more and more American. We believe that we can best serve our own country and most successfully discharge our obligations to humanity by continuing to be openly and candidly, intensely and scrupulously, American. If we have any heritage, it has been that. If we have any destiny, we have found it in that direction.

But if we wish to continue to be distinctively American, we must continue to make that term comprehensive enough to embrace the legitimate desires of a civilized and enlightened people determined in all their relations to pursue a conscientious and reverent life. We cannot permit ourselves to be narrowed and warped by slogans and phrases. It is not the adjective, but the substantive, which is of real importance. It is not the name of Executive Declares Policy That Stands Out as Result of Election Is Economy With Tax Reduction and Reform.

Our own country is leading the world in the general readjustment to the results of the great conflict. Because of what America is and what America has done, a firmer courage, a higher hope, inspires the heart of all humanity.

These results have not occurred by mere chance. They have been secured by a constant and enlightened effort marked by many sacrifices and extending over many generations. We cannot continue these brilliant successes in the future, unless we continue to learn from the past. It is necessary to keep the former experiences of our country both at home and abroad continually before us, if we are to have any science of government. If we wish to erect new structures, we must have a definite knowledge of the old foundations. We must realize that human nature is about the most constant thing in the universe and that the essentials of human relationship do not change. We must frequently take our bearings from these fixed stars of our political firmament if we expect to hold a true course. If we examine carefully what we have done, we can determine the more accurately what we can do.

We stand at the opening of the one hundred and fiftieth year since our national consciousness first asserted itself by unmistakable action with an array of force. The old sentiment of detached and dependent colonies disappeared in the new sentiment of a united and independent nation. Men began to discard the narrow confines of a local charter for the broader opportunities of a national constitution. Under the eternal urge of freedom we became an independent nation. A little less than 50 years later that freedom and independence were reasserted in the face of all the world, and guarded, supported and secured by the Monroe doctrine. The narrow fringe of States along the Atlantic seaboard advanced its frontiers across the hills and plains of an intervening continent until it passed down the golden slope to the Pacific. We made freedom a birthright. We extended our domain over distant islands in order to safeguard our own interests and accepted the consequent obligation to bestow justice and liberty upon less favored peoples. In the defense of our own ideals and in the general cause of liberty we entered the Great War. When victory had been fully secured, we withdrew to our own shores unrecompensed save in the consciousness of duty done.

Propose to Be More and More American.

Throughout all these experiences we have enlarged our freedom, we have strengthened our independence. We have been, and propose to be, more and more American. We believe that we can best serve our own country and most successfully discharge our obligations to humanity by continuing to be openly and candidly, intensely and scrupulously, American. If we have any heritage, it has been that. If we have any destiny, we have found it in that direction.

But if we wish to continue to be distinctively American, we must continue to make that term comprehensive enough to embrace the legitimate desires of a civilized and enlightened people determined in all their relations to pursue a conscientious and reverent life. We cannot permit ourselves to be narrowed and warped by slogans and phrases. We must not the adjective, but the substantive, which is of real importance. It is not the name of the action, but the result of the action, which is the chief concern. It will be well not to be too much disturbed by the thought of either isolation or entanglement of pacifists and militarists. The physical configuration of the earth has separated us from all of the Old World, but the common brotherhood of man, the highest law of all our being, has united us by inseparable bonds with all humanity. Our country represents nothing but peaceful intentions toward all the earth, but it ought not to fail to maintain such a military force as comports with the dignity and security of a great people. It ought to be a balanced force, intensely modern, capable of defense by sea and land, beneath the surface and in the air. But it should be so conducted that all the world may see in it, not a menace, but an instrument of security and peace.

The nation believes thoroughly in an honorable peace under which the rights of its citizens are to be everywhere protected. It has never found that the necessary enjoyment of such a peace could be maintained only by a great and threatening array of arms. In common with other nations, it is now more determined than ever to promote peace through friendliness and good will, through mutual understandings and mutual forbearance. We have never practiced the policy of competitive armaments. We have recently committed ourselves by covenants with the other great nations to a limitation of our sea power. As one result of this, our navy ranks larger, in comparison, than it ever did before. Removing the burden of expense and jealousy, which must always accrue from a keen rivalry, is one of the most effective methods of diminishing that unreasonable hysteria and misunderstanding which are the most potent means of fomenting war. This policy represents a new departure in the world. It is thought, an ideal, which has led to an entirely new line of action. It will not be easy to maintain. Some never moved from their old position, some are constantly slipping back to the old ways of thought and the old action of seizing a musket and relying on force. America has taken the lead in this new direction, and that lead America must continue to hold. If we expect others to rely on our fairness and justice we must show that we rely on their fairness and justice.

If we are to judge by past experience, there is much to be hoped for in international relations from frequent conferences and consultations. We have before us the beneficial results of the Washington conference and the various consultations recently held upon European affairs, some of which were in response to our suggestions and in some of which we were active participants. Even the failures cannot but be accounted useful and an immeasurable advance over threatened or actual warfare. I am strongly in favor of a continuation of this policy, whenever conditions are such that there is even a promise that practical and favorable results might be secured.

Reasons for Adherence to the World Court.

In conformity with the principle that a display of reason rather than a threat of force should be the determining factor in the intercourse among nations, we have long advocated the peaceful settlement of disputes by methods of arbitration and have negotiated many treaties to secure that result. The same considerations should lead to our adherence to the Permanent Court of International Justice. Where great principles are involved, where great movements are under way which promise much for the welfare of humanity by reason of the very fact that many other nations have given such movements their actual support, we ought not to withhold our own sanction because of any small and inessential difference, but only upon the ground of the most important and compelling fundamental reasons. We can not barter away our independence or our sovereignty, but we ought to engage in no refinements of logic, no sophistries, and no subterfuges, to argue away the undoubted duty of this country by reason of the might of its numbers, the power of its resources, and its position of leadership in the world, actively and comprehensively to signify its approval and to bear its full share of the responsibility of a candid and disinterested attempt at the establishment of a tribunal for the administration of even-handed justice between nation and nation. The weight of our enormous influence must be cast upon the side of a reign not of force but of law and trial, not by battle but by reason.

We have never any wish to interfere in the political conditions of any other countries. Especially are we determined not to become implicated in the political controversies of the Old World. With a great deal of hesitation, we have responded to appeals for help to maintain order, protect life and property, and establish responsible government in some of the small countries of the Western Hemisphere. Our private citizens have advanced large sums of money to assist in the necessary financing and relief of the Old World. We have not failed, nor shall we fail to respond, whenever necessary to mitigate human suffering and assist in the rehabilitation of distressed nations. These, too, are requirements which must be met by reason of our vast powers and the place we hold in the world.

Some of the best thought of mankind has long been seeking for a formula for permanent peace. Undoubtedly the clarification of the principles of international law would be helpful, and the efforts of scholars to prepare such a work for adoption by the various nations should have our sympathy and support. Much may be hoped for from the earnest studies of those who advocate the outlawing of aggressive war. But all these plans and preparations, these treaties and covenants, will not of themselves be adequate. One of the greatest dangers to peace lies in the economic pressure to which people find themselves subjected. One of the most practical things to be done in the world is to seek arrangements under which such pressure may be removed, so that opportunity may be renewed and hope may be revived. These must be some assurance that effort and endeavor will be followed by success and prosperity. In the making and financing of such adjustments there is not only an opportunity, but a real duty, for America to respond with her counsel and her resources. Conditions must be provided under which people can make a living and work out of their difficulties. But there is another element, more important than all, without which there cannot be the slightest hope of a permanent peace. That element lies in the heart of humanity. Unless the desire for peace be cherished there, unless this fundamental and only natural source of brotherly love be cultivated to its highest degree, all artificial efforts will be in vain. Peace will come when there is realization that only under a reign of law, based on righteousness and supported by the religious conviction of the brotherhood of man, can there be any hope of a complete and satisfying life. Parchment will fail, the sword will fail, it is only the spiritual nature of man that can be triumphant.

"Clear and Definite Mandate From People."

It seems altogether probable that we can contribute most to these important objects by maintaining our position of political detachment and independence. We are not identified with any Old World interests. This position should be made more and more clear in our relations with all foreign countries. We are at peace with all of them. Our program is never to oppress, but always to assist. But while we do justice to others, we must require that justice be done to us. With us a treaty of peace means peace, and a treaty of amity means amity. We have made great contributions to the settlement of contentious differences in both Europe and Asia. But there is a very definite point beyond which we can not go. We can only help those who help themselves. Mindful of these limitations, the one great duty that stands out requires us to use our enormous powers to trim the balance of the world.

While we can look with a great deal of pleasure upon what we have done abroad, we must remember that our continued success in that direction depends upon what we do at home. Since its very outset it has been found necessary to conduct our Government by means of political parties. That system would not have survived from generation to generation if it had not been fundamentally sound and provided the best instrumentalities for the most complete expression of the popular will. It is not necessary to claim that it has always worked perfectly. It is enough to know that nothing better has been devised. No one would deny that there should be full and free expression and an opportunity for independence of action within the party. There is no salvation in a narrow and bigoted partisanship. But if there is to be responsible party government, the party label must be something more than a mere device for securing office. Unless those who are elected under the same party designation are willing to assume sufficient responsibility and exhibit sufficient loyalty and coherence, so that they can cooperate with each other in the support of the broad general principles of the party platform, the election is merely a mockery, no decision is made at the polls, and there is no representation of the popular will. Common honesty and good faith with the people who support a party at the polls require that party, when it enters office, to assume the control of that portion of the Government to which it has been elected. Any other course is bad faith and a violation of the party pledges.

When the country has bestowed its confidence upon a party by making it a majority in the Congress, it has a right to expect such unity of action as will make the party majority an effective instrument of government. This administration has come into power with a very clear and definite mandate from the people. The expression of the popular will in favor of maintaining our constitutional guarantees was overwhelming and decisive. There was a manifestation of such faith in the integrity of the courts that we can consider that issue rejected for some time to come. Likewise, the policy of public ownership of railroads and certain electric utilities met with unmistakable defeat. The people declared that they wanted their rights to have not a political but a judicial determination, and their independence and freedom continued and supported by having the ownership and control of their property, not in the Government, but in their own hands. As they always do when they have a fair chance, the people demonstrated that they are sound and are determined to have a sound government.

When we turn from what was rejected to inquire what was accepted, the policy that stands out with the greatest clearness is that of economy in public expenditure with reduction and reform of taxation. The principle involved in this effort is that of conservation. The resources of this country are almost beyond computation. No mind can comprehend them. But the cost of our combined governments is likewise almost beyond definition. Not only those who are now making their tax returns, but those who meet the enhanced cost of existence in their monthly bills, know by hard experience what this great burden is and what it does. No matter what others may want, these people want a drastic economy. They are opposed to waste. They know that extravagance lengthens the hours and diminishes the rewards of their labor. I favor the policy of economy, not because I wish to save money, but because I wish to save people. The men and women of this country who toil are the ones who bear the cost of the Government. Every dollar that we carelessly waste means that their life will be so much the more meager. Every dollar that we prudently save means that their life will be so much the more abundant. Economy is idealism in its most practical form.

Opposed to Extremely High Rates of Taxation.

If extravagance were not reflected in taxation, and through taxation both directly and indirectly injuriously affecting the people, it would not be of so much consequence. The wisest and soundest method of solving our tax problem is through economy. Fortunately, of all the great nations this country is best in a position to adopt that simple remedy. We do not any longer need war-time revenues. The collection of any taxes which are not absolutely required, which do not beyond reasonable doubt contribute to the public welfare, is only a species of legalized larceny. Under this republic the rewards of industry belong to those who earn them. The only constitutional tax is the tax which ministers to public necessity. The property of the country belongs to the people of the country. Their title is absolute. They do not support any privileged class; they do not need to maintain great military forces; they ought not to be burdened with a great array of public employes. They are not required to make any contribution to Government expenditures except that which they voluntarily assess upon themselves through the action of their own representatives. Whenever taxes become burdensome a remedy can be applied by the people; but if they do not act for themselves, no one can be very successful in acting for them.

The time is arriving when we can have further tax reduction, when, unless we wish to hamper the people in their right to earn a living, we must have tax reform. The method of raising revenue ought not to impede the transaction of business; it ought to encourage it. I am opposed to extremely high rates, because they produce little or no revenue, because they are bad for the country, and, finally, because they are wrong. We cannot finance the country, we cannot improve social conditions, through any system of injustice, even if we attempt to inflict it upon the rich. Those who suffer the most harm will be the poor. This country believes in prosperity. It is absurd to suppose that it is envious of those who are already prosperous. The wise and correct course to follow in taxation and all other economic legislation is not to destroy those who have already secured success, but to create conditions under which everyone will have a better chance to be successful. The verdict of the country has been given on this question. That verdict stands. We shall do well to heed it.

These questions involve moral issues. We need not concern ourselves much about the rights of property if we will faithfully observe the rights of persons. Under our institutions their rights are supreme. It is not property but the right to hold property, both great and small, which our Constitution guarantees. All owners of property are charged with a service. These rights and duties have been revealed, through the conscience of society, to have a divine sanction. The very stability of our society rests upon production and conservation. For individuals or for governments to waste and squander their resources is to deny these rights and disregard these obligations. The result of economic dissipation to a nation is always moral decay.

These policies of better international understandings, greater economy, and lower taxes have contributed largely to peaceful and prosperous industrial relations. Under the helpful influences of restrictive immigration and a protective tariff, employment is plentiful, the rate of pay is high, and wage earners are in a state of contentment seldom before seen. Our transportation systems have been gradually recovering and have been able to meet all the requirements of the service. Agriculture has been very slow in reviving, but the price of cereals at last indicates that the day of its deliverance is at hand.

Setting an Example in Observance of Law.

We are not without our problems, but our most important problem is not to secure new advantages, but to maintain those which we already possess. Our system of government made up of three separate and independent departments, our divided sovereignty composed of nation and state, the matchless wisdom that is enshrined in our Constitution, all these need constant effort and tireless vigilance for their protection and support.

President's Thoughts on Foreign Relations and Economy at Home

AS TO TAXATION:

"THE policy that stands out with the greatest clearness is that of economy in public expenditure with reduction and reform of taxation. The principle involved in this effort is that of conservation. But there is a very definite point beyond which we cannot go."

He Declares His Opposition to Extremely High Rates "Because They Are Bad for Country and Are Wrong."

In a republic the first rule for the guidance of the citizens is obedience to law. Under a despotism the law may be imposed upon the subject. He has no voice in its making, no influence in its administration, it does not represent him. Under a free government the citizen makes his own laws, chooses his own administrators, which do represent him. Those who want their rights respected under the Constitution and the law ought to set the example themselves of observing the Constitution and the law. While there may be those of high intelligence who violate the law at times, the barbarian and the defective always violate it. Those who disregard the rules of society are not exhibiting a superior intelligence, are not promoting freedom and independence, are not following the path of civilization, but are displaying the traits of ignorance, of servitude, of savagery, and treading the way that leads back to the jungle.

The essence of a republic is representative government. Our Congress represents the people and the states. In all legislative affairs it is the natural collaborator with the President. In spite of all the criticism which often falls to its lot, I do not hesitate to say that there is no more independent and effective legislative body in the world. It is, and should be, jealous of its prerogatives. I welcome its co-operation, and expect to share with it not only the responsibility, but the credit, for our common effort to secure beneficial legislation.

These are some of the principles which America represents. We have not by any means put them fully into practice, but we have strongly signified our belief in them. The encouraging feature of our country is not that it has reached its destination, but that it has overwhelmingly expressed its determination to proceed in the right direction. It is true that we could, with profit, be less sectional and more national in our thought. It would be well if we could replace much that is only a false and ignorant prejudice with a true and enlightened pride of race. But the last election showed that appeals to class and nationality had little effect. We were all found loyal to a common citizenship. The fundamental precept of liberty is toleration. We cannot permit any inquisition either within or without the law or apply any religious test to the holding of office. The mind of America must be forever free.

It is in such contemplations, my fellow countrymen, which are not exhaustive but only representative, that I find ample warrant for satisfaction and encouragement. We should not let the much that is to do obscure the much which has been done. The past and present show faith and hope and courage fully justified. Here stands our country, an example of tranquillity at home, a patron of tranquillity abroad. Here stands its Government, aware of its might but obedient to its conscience. Here it will continue to stand, seeking peace and prosperity, solicitous for the welfare of the wage earner, promoting enterprise, developing waterways and natural resources, attentive to the intuitive counsel of womanhood, encouraging education, desiring the advancement of religion, supporting the cause of justice and honor among the nations. America seeks no earthly empire built on blood and force. No ambition, no temptation, lures her to thought of foreign dominions. The legions which she sends forth are armed, not with the sword, but with the cross. The higher state to which she seeks the allegiance of all mankind is not of human, but of divine origin. She cherishes no purpose save to merit the favor of Almighty God.

RUMANIA ABANDONS PLAN

Not to Attempt Economic Action Against Germany.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, March 4.—The Rumanian Government has decided to drop its threatened economic action against Germany. German interests are said to have convinced the Bucharest Government that, while Germany recognized the Dawes annuities do not offer Rumania reasonable indemnification for war losses and particularly currency redemption, it is absolutely impossible for Germany to admit separate liabilities.

It was argued that Rumanian action along economic lines would only bring reprisals without any possible benefit to either nation. It was reported Rumania would likely follow the German suggestion that the former's efforts could be better directed toward getting the reparation commission to grant an increased allowance.

VICE-PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS DEMANDING REFORM IN PROCEDURE IN THE SENATE

Dawes Declares That, Under Present Rules, Rights of People Are Ovlooked Through Blocking of Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The text of the inaugural speech of Vice President Dawes follows:

"What I say upon entering this office should relate to its administration and the conditions under which it is administered. Unlike the vast majority of deliberative and legislative bodies, the Senate does not elect its presiding officer. He is designated for his duty by the Constitution of the United States.

"In the administration of this office, his duty is to be concerned with methods of effective procedure, as distinguished from any legislative policy of the body over which he presides. It is not for the Vice President to be personally concerned with the interests of political parties or with the policies or projects involved in legislation save in that unusual contingency where, under the Constitution, it becomes necessary for him to cast the deciding vote in case of a tie.

"Nor should he, in view of that unusual contingency, assume any attitude toward prospective legislation until the contingency occurs. Any other course would inevitably lessen the weight of his influence in those impartial and nonpartisan matters with which it is his duty, under the Constitution of the United States, to be concerned.

The Senate's Methods.

"In my conduct, I trust I may yield to no Senator in fairness, courtesy and kindliness and in deference to those unwritten laws which always govern any association of gentlemen, whether official or private. It shall be my purpose not to transgress in any way those limits to my official activity determined by the Constitution of the United States and by proper parliamentary procedure. But the Vice President, in part because he is not elected by the members of this body, nor by a state, but by the people of the United States, and his constitutional and official relations are to the Senate as a whole, should always express himself upon the relations of its methods of transacting public business to the welfare of the nation.

"For him, therefore, to officially call to the attention of the Senate any collective duty such as an improvement in the method under which its business is carried on, so far from being an irrelevant and uncalled for action on his part, is a supreme duty.

"In past years, because the members of this body have cherished most commendable feelings of fairness, courtesy and consideration for each other, as individuals, certain customs have been evolved. These have crystallized into fixed and written rules of procedure for the transaction of public business, which, in their present form, place power in the hands of individuals to an extent, at times, subversive to the fundamental principles of free representative government. Whatever may be said about the misuse of this power under the present rules of the Senate, the fact remains that its existence, inimical as it is to the principles of our constitutional government, cannot properly be against any party, nor against any individual or group of individuals. It has evolved as a natural consequence of the mutual confidence of high-minded men, determined that in their official association as members of the Senate, full and fair opportunity to be heard on all public questions shall be enjoyed by each and every Senator, irrespective of whether or not they are in the minority, either of opinion or of party.

Rights of People Overlooked

"But, however natural has been the evolution of the present rules, however commendable that existing desire on the part of all that the rights of each individual Senator should be observed, the fact remains that under them the rights of the nation and of the American people have been overlooked—and this, notwithstanding that their full recognition of the rights of the nation are in no wise inconsistent with the recognition of every essential right of any individual Senator.

"What would be the attitude of the American people and of the individual Senators themselves toward a proposed system of rules if this was the first session of the Senate of the United States instead of the sixty-ninth? What individual Senator would then have the audacity to propose the adoption of the present rule 22 without modification when it would be pointed out that during the last days of the session the right that is granted every senator to be heard for one hour after two-thirds of the Senate has agreed to bring a measure to a vote, gave a minority of even one Senator, at times, power to defeat the measure and render impotent the Senate itself? That rule, which at times enables Senators to consume in oratory those last precious minutes of a session needed for momentous decisions, places in the hands of one or of a minority of Senators, a greater power than the veto power exercised under the Constitution by the President of the United States, which is limited in its effectiveness by the necessity of an affirmative two-thirds vote.

The Power of One Man.

"Who would dare to contend that under the spirit of democratic government the power to kill legislation providing the revenues to pay the expenses of government should, during the last few days of a session, ever be in the hands of a minority or perhaps one Senator?

"Why should they ever be able to compel the President of the United States to call an extra session of Congress to keep in functioning activity the machinery of the Government itself? Who would dare oppose any changes in the rules necessary to insure that the business of the United States should always be conducted in the interests of the nation and never be in danger of encountering a situation where one man or a minority of men might demand unreasonable concessions under threat of blocking the business of the Government. Who would dare maintain that in the last analysis the right of the Senate itself to act should ever be subordinated to the right of one Senator to make a speech?

"The rules can be found, as is the custom in other deliberative and legislative assemblies, to fully protect a Senator in his rights to be heard without forfeiting at any time the greater right of the Senate to act. The Constitution of the United States gives the Senate and the House of Representatives the right to adopt their own rules for the conduct of business, but this does not excuse customs and rules which, under certain conditions, might put the power of the Senate itself in the hands of individuals to be used in legislative barter. Proper rules will protect the rights of minorities without surrendering the rights of a majority to legislate.

Demanded by Public Opinion.

"Under the inexorable laws of human nature and human reaction, this system of rules, if unchanged, cannot but lessen the effectiveness, prestige and dignity of the United States Senate. Were this the first session of the Senate and its present system of rules, unchanged, should be presented seriously for adoption, the impact of outraged public opinion, reflected in the attitude of the Senators themselves, would crush the proposal like an egg shell. Reform in the present rules of the Senate is demanded, not only by American public opinion, but I venture to say in the individual consciences of a majority of the members of the Senate itself.

"As it is the duty on the part of the presiding officer of the Senate to call attention to defective methods in the conduct of business by the body over which he presides, so, under their constitutional powers, it is the duty of the members of this body to correct them. To evade or ignore an issue between right and wrong methods is in itself a wrong. To the performance of this duty—a duty which is nonpartisan—a duty which is nonsectional—a duty which is at one in the interest of the nation we have sworn to faithfully serve—I ask the consideration of the Senate, appealing to the conscience and to the patriotism of the individual members."

FEWER RAILROAD EMPLOYES

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—At the end of 1924, Class 1 Railroads, which operate about 90 per cent of the country's mileage had fewer employes in service than at any time since 1922, it was reported by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The actual number was 1,726,699 persons, as compared with 1,793,779 a year ago.

Despite the smaller number of workers employed, the total payroll during December, 1924, was $240,348,652, while in December, 1923, it amounted to $234,662,008. The decline in the number of employes attributed chiefly to winter reduction in maintenance of way and structures.

The Speed Mania.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT seems the only proper and sure way to reduce our automobile smashups and getaway escapes is to pass a law to compel the manufacturers to reduce the speed on all makes of cars, with exceptions of police, fire and ambulance cars, which speed should be the limit. However, we know we have mechanics who could "doctor" the speed maniac's cars to insure him his satisfaction on speed. Then a law could be passed when such a violator is captured, give him or her about 10 years in prison at hard work with one meal a day to make his lesson a dear one for the rest.

If something is not done soon to reduce this crime and auto killing, the automobile industry will commit suicide just as the old roughhouse saloon did, for society is going to demand a cure for this auto killing business by some means.

Service on Wellston Car Line.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE writer is an unfortunate commuter on the Wellston line of the United Railways, and wishes to protest against the very poor service on this line. Reference is made in particular to the poor downtown service between 5:30 and 6:30 p. m. Presumably there are so few cars on this line that when a few are bunched to take care of the 5:00 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. crowd there are none left for an hour. Last Saturday night many people were kept waiting a long time at 6:00 p. m. in the wet streets down town.

In contrast to the poor Wellston service the writer points to the Page line. Night after night, when his patience is exhausted, he has turned to the Page line and obtained a car immediately. The only apparent reason for the contrast is that there is a bus line running in competition along the Page line, and that the United Railways is sacrificing service on other lines to compete with the busses. It behooves the company to take care of their patrons along the lines where there is no competition before these people move to sections of the city served by the busses

Compulsory Morals.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I WANT to thank you for the attached editorial headed "Horse Racing in Missouri? Never!" It proves that we have one newspaper that is not afraid of the so-called reformers and that cult who have for their motto, "Thou Shalt Not." Unless this organized cult ceases to attempt the regulation of the people's morals by legislation there will set in such a reaction against all laws that there will be no respect for any law. It seems as if it is always the same organizations and churches that are trying to force the people to obey laws that are obnoxious.

Street Cleaners Complain.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE street cleaners of St. Louis, with the exception of a small crew in the down town district, have been working less than half time ever since December. Their pay amounts to $3.00 per day, so their actual pay is less than $1.00. Will you kindly tell us how anybody can exist on this? Even when we work full time we have to lay off on every little holiday and in rainy weather.

We only work at the present time so that the department can keep a lot of so-called inspectors, superintendents and so forth at full pay. The Mind Your Business organization ruled that the inspectors were necessary to keep up the organization. Please tell me why.

They claim that it costs more money to clean the streets of St. Louis than the streets of Chicago. The pay of street cleaners in Chicago is much higher than the wages paid in St. Louis.

There is something wrong somewhere. We are overstocked with bosses. The majority of them are not put there for their ability but for political reasons. Half of them would starve if they had to work.

AN OLD TIMER.

Lament for Shaw's Garden.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SHAW'S GARDEN is being moved from St. Louis. Where? Who cares. It was given to St. Louis by Henry Shaw to be a garden spot for St. Louis and to create in us who live here a love of nature. From my earliest childhood it has been a place in which to dream dreams, and my dreams have materialized in my own garden.

It has been represented to the public that it was necessary to dispose of a part of the garden to gain revenue with which to carry on the work. Instead of which, the money is being used to purchase property elsewhere for a garden. The reason for moving the garden, we are told, is the factory smoke. No new factory has gone up in this district in ten years, but smoke does now belch from the chimneys of the houses built on the ground the trustees sold.

ONE WHO LOVES ST. LOUIS.

THE COOLIDGE ERA BEGINS.

Today Mr. Coolidge begins a four-year term strictly on his own. It is to be doubted whether he feels such lusty delight as Theodore Roosevelt, who exclaimed when elected in 1904, "Thank heavens, I am no longer an accident." Mr. Coolidge is not given to such bursts of feeling, yet he must be conscious that his divorce from the Harding regime is now complete. Indeed, he has already given signs of personal initiative in his appointments, his attitude toward legislation and in foreign policy.

Of course, the general tone of the Coolidge administration has long ago been set. Negative and colorless it certainly is. There has been nothing whatever to disturb his most conservative adherents, and much to reassure them. Kellogg in the State Department, Warren in the Attorney-General's office, Mellon in the Treasury, men of like backgrounds on the Interstate Commerce Commission and Federal Trade Board, Curtis in the Senate, Longworth in the House—these are all definite symptoms of caution, of respect for big business, of unexciting standpatism.

We may look forward with reasonable hope toward a period of tranquil prosperity, of gradual decrease in the costs of government, of reduction in the public debt, of lowering of taxes on higher incomes and of such a reverberating silence from the White House as has never been known.

But there are other things we should like to see happen. We should like to see Mr. Coolidge develop a leadership, a greater sense of initiative. He has given hints along this line, such as the proposal to call another arms conference. It is to be hoped that he pursues this idea boldly and successfully. If his influence resulted in the inclusion of aircraft, land forces and naval auxiliaries on the agenda of such a conference, it would be a notable piece of statesmanship. Mr. Coolidge's economic and domestic policies are too well settled to expect any striking change, but in other ways it is to be hoped we will find in him a forthright leader.

Certainly the President enters upon this term under the most favorable auspices. He has the confidence of the people, a sizeable majority in both houses of Congress and four full years to make a record for himself. The only conspicuous omission from the picture is a constructive, stimulating and helpful opposition. Such an opposition would be reassuring to those who eye askance men of the Warren type and who question seriously the results of a full application of Mr. Coolidge's economic ideas.

NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

Since 1903 Nicholas Longworth has been elected to every Congress with but one exception, the one which sat from 1913 to 1915. His defeat in that year is eloquent of his entire record. It established definitely his deeply ingrained sense of party regularity, a sense so ingrained that not even a Bull Moose of a father-in-law could root it out. For the gallant Nicholas scorned the Progressive banner and went down with Taft. That two-year period of sackcloth and ashes probably was an important factor in winning for Longworth the job of Speaker. In the Speaker's chair, regularity is considered the sum total of all the virtues.

This, of course, must not be construed as being derogatory to Longworth. It merely proves him a faithful follower of that political philosophy which decrees that in party government party regularity is the method of greatest good. As Speaker, Longworth will naturally show every legitimate preference to the Republican side, yet he has many qualities which may be reassuring to the Democrats.

Long a romantic figure because of his marriage with "Princess" Alice, the new Speaker has preserved his popularity by virtue of his clean record, his personal charm, affability and good nature. He has none of the iron, none of the dominating quality of such of his predecessors as Tom Reed and "Uncle Joe" Cannon. There were giants in the earth in those days, and the job of Speaker was invested with tyrannical powers of which it has since been shorn. A Tom Reed today would be an anachronism.

Longworth may well be expected to preside with all fairness consistent with partisanship. Many worse selections might have been made by the Republican caucus, but few could have been more logical or more generally satisfactory.

THE COPPER KING IS DEAD.

Ex-Senator Clark of Montana, whose death at the age of 86 years was reported yesterday, belonged to the age of American politics "when knighthood was in flower." A meretricious knighthood, to be sure. A senatorship in that feudal era was often nothing more than a social accolade for the warrior who had won the prize in the financial tourney. The "greatest deliberative body on earth" was a millionaire's club. Its membership in Clark's day included such Capuans as Dryden of New Jersey, Platt and Depew of New York, Crane of Massachusetts, Aldrich and Wetmore of Rhode Island, Fairbanks of Indiana. Among "the little brothers of the rich" were Foraker of Ohio, Burton of Kansas, Burrows of Michigan.

From Clark and copper to Walsh and Wheeler is the epochal distance that Montana has traveled in a quarter of a century. And Montana epitomizes the national advance. The scandals that rocked state capitals East and West in that literally golden age are now but humorous memories to the gray heads that throbbed with indignation in their hot, idealistic youth.

Under what domed roof the rawest scenes were staged may be a question. Albany surely will challenge the historian's attention. Harrisburg cannot, in accuracy, be ignored. As it draped the toga on Mark Hanna, Columbus, O., reeled and trembled. But memory's treacherous appraisal will place the crown on Butte's rough, ugly head. For Clark became a Senator from Montana only after "the drums and tramplings of three conquests." Three times he was elected Senator—in 1890, in 1899 and again in 1901—before he reached his seat. Such rebuffs might have discouraged an ordinary ambition. But the man who made his millions in the copper wars of Montana was of stern stuff, whatever his vanity. He gave a rather sporty demonstration of his quality when he built a railroad in defiance of our transportation royalty which frowned threateningly upon his lese majeste.

Clark's trail across the wide-open spaces of the Northwest is something of an Iliad which contrived a Washington canto and has finally ended in the bizarre pile on Fifth avenue. It is a melodrama that can never again be enacted. That is a truth to rejoice over—and somehow to regret.

THE LAW OF THE HIGHWAYS.

The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that Federal prohibition agents may stop and search automobiles and other vehicles for contraband liquor without a search warrant. The opinion, delivered by Chief Justice Taft, dwelt upon the intent of Congress in passing the law to make a distinction as regards the necessity for a search warrant between dwellings and automobiles. It held this distinction to be constitutional and in conformity with the construction of the constitutional guaranty of freedom from unreasonable search and seizure "since the beginning of the Government." Justices McReynolds and Sutherland dissented.

The opinion of the Supreme Court is the law, of course, provided experience proves its wisdom and sanctions it. That is the test which any law, however sponsored, must meet. The question whether this law will meet that test was raised by the dissenting Justices, who insisted "it would be intolerable and unreasonable if a prohibition agent were authorized to stop every automobile on the chance of finding liquor and thus subject all persons lawfully using the highways to the inconvenience and indignity of such a search." The court held that the individual subjected to this experience is amply protected by the fact that, under the law, he can recover his automobile and contents if he is not guilty of violating the law and can bring suit for damages against the officers making the arrest.

Such redress, we believe, is questionable, for three reasons: First, the cost of such litigation; second, the obvious difficulties attending it in the case of the tourist who lives far from the jurisdiction in which the offense occurs; third, the fact that such a judgment, if obtained, may be worthless.

But there is a weightier objection to this decision, it seems to us, than the concrete point raised by the dissenting Justices. The decision, we submit, turns its back on the very spirit of the Constitution and the genius of our institutions and laws. Under this ruling the law-abiding are exposed to humiliation, and, indeed, to grave peril, in order that the lawless may be apprehended. The opinion seems to be more concerned with promoting the enforceability of a law than in conserving the rights and liberty of good citizens. It puts a premium on a criminal law and, actually or potentially, penalizes citizenship.

It is a dangerous construction. How such a law will work out in practice may well cause anxiety. Its possible abuses are terrifying. There is the prohibition agent himself, often a man of unscrupulous character, more often lacking in discretion, in whom is vested a power of tyranny over our highways. And certainly there is nothing to prevent the criminal from impersonating a prohibition agent and committing robbery or any manner of crime against citizens made defenseless by the law. A few such outrages and citizens will refuse to submit to such search and seizure and will resist the attempts of such agents, and will be within their elemental rights in so resisting.

The Supreme Court, in our opinion, has dangerously disregarded the security of citizens and undermined a fundamental guaranty in trying to make enforceable a nonenforceable law.

"FULLY INSURED."

The $35,000 or more in gold and currency taken from the Mound City Trust Co. by robbers Tuesday was said to be "fully insured." In most of the bank robberies recently reported, bank officials and the public had the cold comfort of knowing that the loss fell on the insurance companies. In the case of a weak bank, insurance might prevent failure, for which safeguard depositors would be thankful.

But this condition of having funds and securities insured, while necessary so long as we suffer from a reign of banditry, has unpleasant possibilities. It must tend towards neglect of those direct precautions which might discourage banditry, in the shape of armed watchmen, more alert employes, more perfect alarm systems, rewards for the arrest of the robbers who may escape, and, especially, insistence upon the utmost efforts of the police in catching the criminals and persistence in pushing their conviction and punishment in the courts.

It would not be good policy at present to omit the precaution of taking out insurance against loss through robbery. But it is certainly unwise to allow this condition to create apathy towards the more enduring precaution of doing everything to prevent robbery. Such apathy can only result in the encouragement of those bold criminals who are now having such an easy time holding up banks, snatching payrolls, robbing trains and laughing at officials and public. Insurance, unless supplemented by an alert watch and a determination, backed by arms, to prevent robbery, will, in the long run, bring the worst results.

THE DRESS-SUIT BLUES.

The news is full of blues. From New York comes the decree of tailors that men must wear blue evening dress and silk pants. And at Washington, with the blessing of Henry Ford, Luther Burbank and Barnarr McFadden, the antitobacco convention will attempt to abolish blue smoke.

There is a flamboyant old proverb to the effect that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. If there are truths that accumulate truthfulness with age this is one of them. Today more than ever it fairly reeks with truth. The funereal dress suit has become the vested right of generations. By its uniformity it could not vary from correctness. It is an immutable disguise subject only to the caprices of embonpoint and an occasional oscillation in trouser-leg latitudes. For the average well-behaved citizen it is good for a lifetime.

All of this time, of course, it has been the despair of sartorialists, to whom the obsolescence of style means fortune. Let them have their way and even trousers as an institution would not be safe. We should be wearing anything, from Roman tunics to Elizabethan ostrich plumes. They have long had their eye on the perennial dress suit, have these conspirators, and at last have organized and planned an attack to throw us males back into colors and the fashion plate.

As our Tory friends would say, the first step is an entering wedge—and then back to silks and laces and bankruptcy.

PANETELA.

Yes, Luella,
Modern science
Knocks the old stuff
Limp and cold;
Think how few
Of childhood's stories
Even now
May be retold.
One can only
Rouse the laughter
Of a more
Enlightened age,
And at length
The old-time classics
Must forsake

Take the recent Exposition
On pituitary glands:
Something almost
No great story
As to gianthood
Withstands.
Giants,
So the doctors
Tell us,
While they may
A moment thrive,
Are but weaklings
Usually Dead and gone
At twenty-five.

Any scientist,
My dearie,
Asked of David
And his sling,
Will explain it
As a purely
Plain pituitary
Thing.
That is,
Philistine Goliath,
Meant but briefly
For the scene,
Would have gone down
Though our hero
Had but hit him
With a bean.

So, too,
With the famous
Ajax:
Had the Trojans
Only guessed,
He as well
Was a defective,
And a gland case,
Like the rest.
Had someone,
Despite his bellow,
Lightly socked him
On the nose,
Like as not
The tale of Homer
Had come down
To us in prose.

Thus it goes,
My sweet Luella:
Nothing cherished
From the past
But the real
Ogre science
Comes to laugh
At it at last.
So that Jack
The giant killer
Even scarcely
Can survive
Since he had
As well,
Says science,
Brought the giant
In alive.

The Longworth baby made a much bigger stir in Washington than the inauguration. It is said that one of the first friends in whom Mrs. Longworth confided was Mrs. Coolidge, whom she told over the phone during a dinner party at the White House. Mrs. Coolidge, as the story goes in Washington, was excited, and rushed back to the table as the bearer of great news.

"When is it to be?" someone asked.

"Really, I was so excited by the news that I forgot to ask her," Mrs. Coolidge said.

At which Mr. Coolidge spoke up in his dry little voice from the end of the table:

"I understand about the middle of February."

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

WITHOUT QUOTATION MARKS.

From the New York World.

IT is useful before Congress adjourns to consider the extent to which the country's whole idea of the President's position is formed nowadays via nothing which the President himself says but via what the correspondents say he has said. Without a word of direct quotation from the White House, Mr. Coolidge has taken a stand upon the following questions within the last four weeks:

Feb. 3—That there would be time for Congress to enact farm legislation before adjourning.

Feb. 6—That the conference report on the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill was satisfactory to the administration.

Feb. 10—That the flexible provisions of the tariff law should not be repealed.

Feb. 10—That German property held by the Alien Property Custodian should not be returned.

Feb. 10—That the creation of an independent air service, as urged by General Mitchell, would be a mistake.

Feb. 12—That neither the appointment of Charles B. Warren to be Attorney-General nor of Thomas F. Woodbury to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, nor of William E. Humphrey to be a member of the Federal Trade Commission would be withdrawn.

Feb. 13—That if Mr. Warren's name were rejected by the present Senate it would be sent to the new Senate when it met.

Feb. 16—That the Senate's postal pay bill would be vetoed unless the bill was properly amended.

Feb. 20—That the problems of the farmer were adequately taken care of in the report of the President's agricultural conference.

Feb. 20—That talk abroad of a new arms conference was not the result of a "feeler" put out by the administration; there had been no "feeler."

Feb. 27—That the Dickinson farm bill passed by the House was a useless measure.

Feb. 28—That nothing had occurred to change the administration's attitude on the French debt.

Now here are a dozen matters as important as any questions which come up in the administration of the public's business. Matters of foreign policy, of taxation, of farm legislation, of disarmament, of public property, of appointment to high public office, of tariff regulations, of postal matters, of foreign debts, of Muscle Shoals legislation, of possible reorganization in the army. It would, in fact, be difficult to name another short list of questions of as much importance to the country. On but one of these questions has the President spoken a word in public. Yet upon every one of them he has taken a definite position (and in a few case, two definite positions) in his conversations with the correspondents.

The practice of taking a position without accepting responsibility for that position has its advantages. It permits the correspondents to check up on rumors of asking possible blank questions which the President might be unwilling to answer if he were to be directly quoted. It also has its disadvantages. For it is a practice which lends itself with special ease to the sending up of trial balloons; it sometimes ties the correspondents up in confidence on material which may be readily obtainable from other sources; and in certain cases it unquestionably leads to irresponsibility on the part of both the executive and his interpreter.

ASSAILS BOTH SIDES OF 'HERESY IN 1925'

John Cowper Powys, in Lecture, Views Fundamentalist as Impregnably Ignorant.

Fundamentalists and modernists alike were severely mauled by John Cowper Powys, Oxfordian novelist, critic and essayist, in his discussion of "Heresy in 1925," from the point of view of the literary or literate man, at a meeting last night of the Contemporary Club at Buckingham Hotel.

He spoke of the fundamentalist as impregnably ignorant and called him "poor wretch," but he also pictured the modernist as a brilliant salesman, in some cases, who attempted to replace the keystones of the spiritual structure of 2000 years with hollow and unbeautiful banalities. He even called the scientist, grubbing over his logical formula for truths about such illogical beings as people, a "poor wretch."

Powys was presented to the club in a somewhat evangelistic aspect, but his manner, like his matter, carried no suggestion of the professional revivalist. He talked with his deep-set eyes on the ceiling, somewhere above and back of his audience, as if his interest was in what he said and not whether his hearers liked it. Nor did he begin by asking everybody who wanted to go to hell to leave, nor conclude with a request for everybody who wanted to go to heaven to stand up. But the attention of the 200 or 300 listeners during his address and their applause at its close indicated that questions of heaven and hell aside, whether they believed in vicarious atonement or not, they did appreciate a vicarious message to the controversialists.

Making Use of Christianity.

"The layman would like to say something to both sides," he said. "Neither of you have realized—and you'll never realize, because you will never tell you—how far our skepticism, when we are skeptical, goes. When we are skeptical it goes so far that it comes near undermining not only the dogmas which you modernists feebly attack, but all Christian faith, and not only that, but all Christian ethics and morality.'

"'Is there anything left?' That is the question we literary men ask. Is there any way we can make use of this great mythology, the Christian traditions all surrounding us, even in the moments when we see the universe as blind chaos dominated by blind force?

"Christianity is a historical religion. Its traditions are important simply because they have existed, because on them have focused groups of the human mind. You must have some sort of edifice to occupy or attack or, if you're leaving it, to jump off from—something more than the banalities of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man—something whereby people may get to think they are saved and very simple-minded people may change their lives.

"Of course, if you are more sophisticated—an old bird is not easily caught with such chalk—it is harder to achieve that pleasant feeling. But study the way the saints got religion, how extremely metaphysical it was, how some of them laid their souls bare under the scalpel. You will see that in Christianity there are many mansions of many altitudes and shapes, for minds of every height and degree.

What Literary Men Ask For.

"We literary men do not ask for this tradition in our religion, but more intelligence. There is something in Christianity which you, the controversialists, have neglected and forgotten. How long the Golden Rule has been in the world, and how rarely has anyone in the world acted upon it!

"We have the beauty of the religion left, and nobody can take that away from us. Is the Virgin birth beautiful, exciting, lodged in the esthetic sense of humanity? I think it is. If our Christ is not divine how can we get the same miraculous thrill as though He came freshly and gloriously from beyond, into the world at Christmastime?

"They say He was a good man. Does that satisfy you as well? The teachings of their 'good man' are sound ethics. Does that inspire you? Does that make the snow glitter more brilliantly, does it make that dawn strange and lovely beyond other dawns of the year? For what do you think of at Christmastide—overeating?

"These things have become immortal. The church—the hopes and fears of humanity through 20 centuries—has consecrated these things and this beauty.

"Let us not call the modernists. I'm speaking of the New York modernists — advertisers, clever men who know how to attract large congregations of fools. Let's philosophize. There is no philosophy at all in the wrangling of Dr. Fosdick and Dr. That, as there should be if it is to be worthy of intelligent human beings.

Effect on Young People.

"Meantime a great number of young people, intelligent, sensitive and actually religious young people are coming to drastic and very destructive conclusions. We would have them not to follow the Ingersolls and Branns. If they are sensitive to the beauty of the old things that can't take this vulgar and unjust stand, that the fundamentalists are ranting and boring old men who don't know anything—who don't even know what they think, they may see that there are certain things which, perhaps, must

"No set of bald-heads invented the Christian religion. Humanity invented it. Humanity would never condescend to invent a semi-philosophical, semi-scientific religion dedicated to such banalities as the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, for it must appeal not only to God's darling idiots but also to the man of intelligence and sensitiveness. Humanity must have its wounded, hurt, tortured God—its strange, mysterious, glorious being from beyond—something demiurgic, divine, surprising. If Christ hadn't existed it would have been necessary to invent Him for the craving of the human heart."

PARIS, March 4.—The French Air Ministry has announced that cash prizes aggregating 1,000,000 francs will be distributed among French airplane manufacturers whose machines hold world aviation records on Dec 31, 1925. The prizes will be divided between plane builders and motor manufacturers on the basis of two-thirds to the former and one-third to the latter. Inasmuch as all prizes paid manufacturers during 1924 were turned over, either entirely or in part, to pilots, the aviators are in a cheerful mood.

MISS CLAGGETT WEDS DONALD DANFORTH

THE Westminster Presbyterian Church was filled last night for the wedding of Miss Dorothy Claggett, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Claggett, and Donald Danforth, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Danforth of 17 Kingsbury place.

Easter lilies adorned the pulpit where the Rev. Dr. Ralph Bailey of Omaha, Neb., formerly of St. Louis, performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Russell H. Stafford of Pilgrim Congregational Church.

The large bridal party included Mrs. Randolph Compton of New York, formerly Miss Dorothy Danforth of St. Louis, and a sister of the bridegroom, matron of honor; Miss Jane Brevoort Walden of New York, maid of honor, and Miss Mary Louise Woods of Sewickley, Pa., Harriet Moore, Jane McElroy and Mary Lemon Sipple, bridesmaids; Lewis B. Stuart of Kansas City, best man, and William R. Compton Jr., Gorden Philpott, Lyall Stuart, Turner Clarkson, Randolph Compton, Barclay Witherspoon and William N. Claggett Jr., groomsmen.

The young women wore gowns fashioned alike of chiffon, trimmed with gold lace. The matron and maid of honor were in blue, and the maids in peach blow. Shimmering lace edged the apron effect at the front of the skirts and the short capes which depended from their shoulders. There were tiny sleeves. Large peach-colored chiffon hats, of the poke variety, trimmed with the lace and roses, completed the costumes and they carried sunburst roses tied with gold gauze.

The bride's gown was white satin, simply made with a rose point lace bertha, and the soft draperies of the skirt caught with orange blossoms. An exquisite court train of rose point lace was fastened to her shoulders and trailed several yards on the floor in a panel, and over this was worn the cloudy tulle bridal veil, fashioned into a fan-shaped ruche at the back, worn to her hair with orange blossoms. She carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony a large reception was held at the Claggett home, 5115 Lindell boulevard, which was enlarged by a huge canvas marquee built at the side and adorned with smilax and festoons of laurel. Lilies and white roses banked the mantels and trimmed the reception rooms of the house and quantities of white blossoms were used on the bridal table.

The out-of-town guests included Mrs. Bailey, who accompanied her husband here from Omaha; Mrs. Charles Claggett of Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Stevens of Jefferson City, and Mrs. Herbert Gardner of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Danforth will make their home in the Warwick Court apartments after their honeymoon trip in Bermuda. The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and Smith College and Mr. Danforth of Princeton.

PATRIOTIC ADDRESS GIVEN AT NOONDAY LENTEN SERVICES

The Rev. J. W. Behnken of Houston, Tex., Speaks on Issues of War and Peace.

A patriotic address was delivered by the Rev. J. W. Behnken of Houston, Tex., today at the Lutheran noonday meeting at the American Theater. "God Bless Our Native Land" was the title of the address, and the hymn of that name was sung. Special mention was made of the inauguration of President Coolidge. Speaking of the issues of war and peace, Pastor Behnken said:

"What shall I do when my Government calls me to the colors? Is it right for me to go to war? In our day some of the very people who were loudest to urge enlistment during the war are denouncing military service as unchristian. But Scripture tells us that the Government does not bear the sword in vain, and urges Christians to be subject."

The constitution of the new church as promulgated in Chihuahau calls for recognition of the independence of the Mexican Catholic Church from the Roman Church; payment of the various kinds of taxes by the Roman Catholic Church, celebration of all kinds of ceremonies in a humble spirit, according to the spiritual doctrines of Christ; absolute knowledge of the Apostolic (New Church) delegates; the abolition of the celibacy of the priests; construction of hospitals and sanitariums for poor people and the moralization of church and priests.

STATE SENATE PASSES BILL TO CURB INCOME TAX EVASIONS

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 4.—Nearly a million dollars more revenue annually to the State would be realized from the State income tax under a bill passed by the Senate yesterday. The measure was sponsored by Senators McCawley, Cave and Farris, and provides for the transfer of collection of the State income tax from the supervision of the State Auditor to the State Tax Commission and strengthens the law so as to permit fewer evasions.

The bill was passed by a vote of 28 to 2, Senators Hilderth and Depelheurer voting against it. No increase in the tax is provided in the bill, but, according to its sponsor, the additional money will be realized through decreases in the cost of collection and through fewer evasions of the tax.

The measure provides that every person filling a Federal income tax report must file one with the State Tax Commission and must make statements giving the essential figures contained in the Federal return. Other provisions to make evasion of the tax more difficult also are contained in the bill. The bill now goes to the House for action.

Fire fighter takes REM when he gets a smoke cough

REM has relieved many different kinds of coughs since its healing properties were first discovered. But it remained for Tom Masterson of Engine Company No. 46, on Sandusky St., Pittsburgh, to tell us a new one.

Read what Mr. Masterson says of REM:

"When bad weather comes, I often get coughs during the winter, but no regular cough of mine has ever been as bad as the one I get after we've been fighting a fire where there's a lot of smoke.

"One like Marvin's Bakery, for instance, on Liberty Ave. When that burnt last January, eighteen of us were knocked out by the smoke. There was over a hundred tons of paper burning there, and the smoke was so bad I was half blinded for the next two days.

"And cough! Gosh, my throat was so sore it felt like a knife sticking it whenever I'd take a deep breath. And that's no fun, either, let me tell you.

"What helped me most then was REM. It seems to take the soreness out better than anything else. I'd been using it right along for coughs, and so had my mother and sister, but now I use it too whenever my throat gets bad from smoke. I know a lot of other men in the department are using it, too. It sure does take hold of a cough right away."

So many who have tried REM speak of the quick relief it brings.

This quick action is not just a matter of luck, for REM contains a special ingredient (too expensive for old-style, slower-acting cough syrups) that causes it to cling to your throat as it is swallowed. And there it spreads a soothing, healing film over the sore inflamed membranes.

REM is pleasant to take. And it contains no Opiates.

Ask your druggist for REM—in the blue package with the round orange label. If REM doesn't help you you can have your money back. Fair enough, isn't it?

REGENTS COMPANY NOT AFFECTED BY LEWIS PROCEEDING

Attorney for Promoters' Creditors in California Enterprises Explains the Situation.

The relation of the Regents Mercantile Corporation to the E. G. Lewis enterprises in University City, and to the present Lewis bankruptcy proceedings in Southern California, is outlined in a letter which the Post-Dispatch has received from Oscar L. Willett of Los Angeles, attorney for the creditors who brought the bankruptcy proceedings.

A dispatch from the Santa Barbara correspondent of the Post-Dispatch, which was published Feb. 18, spoke of the Regents Mercantile Corporation as the only one of Lewis' St. Louis enterprises listed in the California bankruptcy proceeding.

Willett's Explanation.

"The dispatch, of course, was published by you in good faith," Attorney Willett writes. "It is similar to what appeared in the Los Angeles and San Francisco papers. They have published articles correcting the statement, and I trust that you will give publicity to a correction.

"The holders of the Regents Mercantile Corporation notes are in no way concerned with the bankruptcy proceedings against E. G. Lewis. Among the assets of E. G. Lewis are $481,000 of these notes and they are therefore included in the schedules as assets. It is true that the people to whom these notes were originally issued and who turned them over to Mr. Lewis for investment in other enterprises have a claim in this present proceeding. That, however, does not give a claim to people who at present time own any of the Regents Mercantile Corporation notes. That corporation is not in bankruptcy and not affected by this proceeding except that the trustee in bankruptcy holds these notes and of course will be attempting to realize upon them.

Purpose of Organization.

"It is my understanding that the Regents Mercantile Corporation was organized during the time of Mr. Lewis' difficulties in St. Louis, and for the express purpose of buying in the assets at the receiver's sale for the benefit of the creditors who organized that corporation. The capital stock of $4000 was held principally by Mr. Lewis. Each creditor who joined this corporation, and who had filed a claim against the then receiver, assigned that claim to the Regents Mercantile Corporation and received in lieu thereof the note of this corporation for the full amount of the claim. Some $2,712,000 of these notes were issued, indicating that an equal amount of claims at book values, were assigned to the corporation.

"I understand that the corporation either directly or indirectly bought in the buildings at University City, and took title to them for the benefit of the creditors who had assigned their claims to this corporation. Later on the holders of $481,000 of these notes delivered the notes to Mr. Lewis in consideration of his promise to issue to them certain other securities. The notes of the Regents Mercantile Corporation, however, are not notes of E. G. Lewis, so that the transaction amounts merely to a sale by the holders of this amount of Regents Mercantile Corporation notes to Mr. Lewis.

Placing a Second Mortgage.

"It is my understanding that the buildings owned by the Regents Mercantile Corporation are rented by some department of the Government and that the net proceeds of the rent are applied to the indebtedness against the buildings. There is a small balance of some $20,000 or $30,000 due on the first mortgage.

"The only thing in connection with the entire transaction known to me as being subject to criticism is the placing of a second mortgage in the form of a trust deed on the buildings of the Regents Mercantile Corporation. It appears that Mr. Lewis was personally indebted to certain persons, and that to secure this personal indebtedness in 1921 the Regents Mercantile Corporation executed a second mortgage, in form a trust deed, to Nathan Frank. Inasmuch as the Regents Mercantile Corporation was organized to hold the buildings in trust for the creditors who assigned their claims against E. G. Lewis to the Regents Mercantile Corporation, of which fact all the parties to this second mortgage, in form a trust deed, had actual knowledge, we are of the opinion that the deed is absolutely void and that in a proper proceeding the court will cancel this trust deed and compel an accounting for all payments of principal, interest and trustee's fees made thereunder.

Contemplated Action.

"It will be the duty of myself as the attorney for about 90 per cent of the creditors of this present bankruptcy proceeding, and of the attorney for the receiver of the estate, to realize as much as possible of the $481,000 of the Regents Mercantile Corporation now included in the Lewis assets. This will require a thorough investigation on our part and if we find the facts to be according to our understanding, an action will be commenced to cancel this second mortgage, in form a trust deed, and for an accounting for all sums paid thereunder. Such an action, of course, will be for the benefit of all of the holders of the Regents Mercantile Corporation notes, as it would mean the recovery directly, and by reason of the cancellation of the unpaid balance of this second mortgage, of approximately $300,000. A holder of the Regents Mercantile Corporation notes, of course, will profit by any such recovery in proportion to the amount of his holdings."

Attorney Willett further says, in the letter, that the creditors of Lewis in his other St. Louis enterprises have no provable claims against the present bankruptcy estate. This is in line with the fact that the local Lewis corporations were wound up by receivership proceedings, with a loss of more than $7,000,000 to the investors, who, however, accepted the payments in settlement of their claims. The attorney also says that the Palos Verdes project, a large real estate enterprise, is in no way involved in the Lewis proceeding.

You, too, can keep yourself and baby well and happy

You just know they're NOT well

There is no reason for you or your baby to look or feel this way

CONSTIPATION means MELANCHOLY and DISEASE

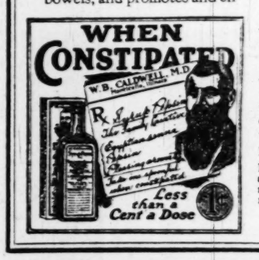
Melancholy for the Mother, disease for the Child! The responsibility of the mother does not end with properly clothing and feeding the baby. Her own health is directly reflected in the little one, and the poisons bottled up in her body by constipation transfer themselves to the innocent child and too often result in serious sickness. Mother's bowels should act at least twice a day, and baby's bowels more frequently. Physicians agree on this subject.

Dr Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

The Family Laxative

—relieves constipation. It is a pure, harmless, gentle combination of Egyptian senna, pepsin and aromatics in liquid form that opens up the bowels, and promotes and encourages Nature to perform her proper functions. No doctor could give you a better laxative than this one of Dr. Caldwell's which has been used for over 30 years.



As Pleasing, Easy and Effective For Mother As For Baby

It is mild and wholly free from opiates or narcotics. Because it is so pleasant to take, babies and children like it, and it should be in the medicine chest of every family for instant use. More than 10,000,000 bottles used annually prove its effectiveness.

It is sold everywhere medicine is sold—and guaranteed. Try it at our risk. Your druggist will return your money if it fails to do as promised.

How Seismograph Operates In Recording Earthquakes

Instrument at St. Louis U. Installed in 1909, Preserves Principle Discovered in 1894 by European Scientist.

Whenever old Mother Earth remembers her youth and does a shimmy, to the consternation of the little people who have cluttered up her exterior with skyscrapers and the like, they go to seismographs for news of where the earthquake came from. The instruments never withhold an answer.

Interest being renewed by the latest quake, in the eastern part of the United States and Canada, last Saturday night, the Post-Dispatch sought Brother George E. Rueppel, seismologist at St. Louis University, for a restatement of how the instrument works.

In 1894 a European scientist, experimenting with a delicate pendulum, observed that it was affected by an earthquake many miles away. The pendulum remained motionless while the framework, from which it was suspended by the tremor, just as a watch suspended by the chain will remain still although the chain is rapidly moved back and forth.

This principle is preserved in the seismograph installed in 1909 on concrete in a vault under the university building at Grand and Lindell boulevards. The pendulum is upside down, but the pendulum action is obtained by having it a little off vertical and balancing the pull of gravity on its 160-pound bob against two springs.

How Lines Are Made Low.

To the bob are attached two levers which rest upon the frame of the instrument and are brought together in front of a revolving chart of smoked paper, on which they make the record with aluminum bristles. The framework is vibrated by the earth tremors, while the inverted pendulum is held theoretically still by the inertia of its 160 pounds.

The record consists of straight lines when there is no disturbance, and wavy or jagged lines when there is one. An electrical impulse from an automatic clock causes the pens to mark a short crossline every minute and a longer one each hour.

Frequently high winds shaking the building cause a slight irregularity in the lines. Sometimes as often as three or four times a month an irregularity is caused by an earth vibration, but Brother Rueppel said that these had no significance except that they might precede a "real" tremor, and added that they were easily distinguished from the real thing.

Computing the Distance.

The first wave from an earthquake comes straight through the earth and faster than the second, which comes by way of the surface. Hence the distance may be estimated by measuring on the chart how much the first wave has gained on the second. Last Saturday night the short first wave came three minutes before the long second wave. From this the distance was computed as 1100 miles, and the direction seemed from the southeast. The earthquake was coming in when Brother Rueppel made his customary inspection before retiring.

Direction is a harder matter. One of the two levers lies east and west, so that it is affected by impulses from those directions. The other, at right angles, records impulses from north or south. If the shock comes from an intermediate point of the compass its force is split accurately between the levers. If the waviest line is made by the east-and-west lever the disturbance lies nearer one of those directions than to north or south.

The only method of determining direction with approximate certainty is that of comparing the records of three stations some distance apart. If circles drawn on the distance radius recorded at each station meet at any point, there is the center of the earthquake.

Violence of the shock is not estimated by the violence with which the instrument reacts, since this is softened by distance, but also by the period during which vibrations recur as the waves chase each other around the earth until spent. Saturday's quake caused a stronger initial reaction than the Yokohama disaster, but the recurrent waves of the Japanese earthquake continued for hours.

CHICAGO BAN ON 'GUNPLAY' MOVIES HELD VALID BY COURT

Such Films May Be Said to Be Immoral, Inculcating Murder, Decision Says.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Chicago's ordinance regulating the showing of motion pictures featuring gunplay has been declared valid by the Appelate Court.

"Such pictures should not be shown unless plainly harmless," said the decision, made public today. "Where gunplay or the shooting of human beings is the essence of the play and does not pertain to the necessities or war, to the preservation of law and order, is for personal spite or revenge, and involves taking the law in one's own hands, and thus becomes a murder, the picture may be said to be immoral it inculcates murder."

The case originated when the Board of Censors refused a permit for "The Deadwood Coach." The Fox Film Co. obtained an injunction against interference with the showing.

After stating that the counsel for the film company 'urged that, because the picture was only criticised as exhibiting too much shooting, it was innocuous," the Court said:

"On the contrary, in our judgment, that charge was justifiable condemnation, especially as one of the most conspicuous crimes today is indiscriminate shooting, the statistics of which, we all know, are appalling."

TEACHER HELD AS ROBBER

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Robbery charges have been placed against Edward Fey, 25 years old, local manual training instructor by day and alleged robber by night. George Porter and Stanton Cady, his companions, were similarly accused.

An attempt to rob a local theater Saturday night, in which Cady was wounded by the police, led to the arrest of the trio. Fey admitted, the police say, that he was the leader of the trio.

$4500 for Widow of Slain Officer.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 4.—Mrs. Catherine Burns of Leavenworth, widow of David W. Burns, record clerk and parole officer at the State Penitentiary, who was slain by Benny Casey and Charles O'Keefe, escaped convicts, at Alicia, Ark., Dec. 14, 1923, will receive $4500 under a bill passed by the Legislature and sent to the Governor. Three thousand dollars of that amount is to be used for the purchase of a home. The remaining $1500 will be paid in monthly installments of $50. Mrs. Burns supports six children.

FIRES AT FLEEING ROBBERS

Two armed robbers, who entered the Piggly Wiggly store at 1447 Arlington avenue, about 5 p. m., yesterday, forced the manager, Maxie A. Hatcher, and a clerk to lie on the floor, while they rifled the register of $28. The robbers ran out, pursued by Hatcher, who had obtained his revolver. The chase led over Arlington to Wells avenue, thence west to Semple avenue, where the robbers climbed into a Ford coupe and escaped. Hatcher said he fired six shots directly at the robbers, and thinks he wounded one of them.

Man Could Not Eat Stomach Full Of Gas

Everything He Ate Caused Stomach to Bloat

"I could not eat anything without my stomach bloating or swelling up. Now I can eat anything. Adlerika is the best stomach medicine I ever saw." (Signed) R. T. Caruthers.

Intestinal Evacuant

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel.

In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowel inaction), a single spoonful of Adlerika often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, if Adlerika does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured.

Reports from Physicians

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 37 years experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a user of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. In St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co. and other leading druggists.

THREE LIVES CLAIMED BY JUDICIAL ERROR

With Murder Case Principals Dead, Witnesses Now Want to Change Story.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—One of the most horrible judicial errors in history is recalled by efforts now being made in the courts to obtain justice for three innocents, all of whom are now dead. A mother, a father and the oldest of their four children were convicted of murder and sentenced to 15 years' penal servitude in French Guiana for a crime they did not commit.

The mother went mad when the verdict was announced. The father died in chains. The son served out his time, and returned to France, no longer a boy, but a man of 35, to endeavor, through long and weary years, to have the stigma lifted from his name and that of his parents. His efforts were vain, and only two years ago he too went mad and died shortly afterward.

Story of Petty Quarrels.

It was the story of petty quarrels and jealousies in a little community in the Vosges Mountains. Laurent and Josephine Adam lived a peaceful, laborious life, and reared a family of four children. One day a neighbor, an old woman, came to them and said:

"I cannot live with my two brothers. They are trying to kill me. They want my money. My life is nothing but torture. Take me in, let me live with you as a boarder and finish my last days in tranquillity."

The Adam family was sorry for the poor woman's plight. They took her in.

The woman's brothers naturally were not pleased with the arrangement. They foresaw that their sister might disinherit them. Consequently, they persecuted her even in her new home, and over a long period endeavored to make her presence so disagreeable to the Adams that they would turn her out, forcing her to return to her brothers' roof.

At last even the patience of the Adam family was exhausted, and one night, after a violent scene between the elder Adam boy, Justin, and the nephew of their aged boarder who had come to annoy them, they informed the old woman that she would have to live elsewhere.

She left the house and disappeared. Nothing was heard of her for months. Some people said they had seen her walking alone toward the forest. As in all small communities there was much gossip, and various rumors were circulated in which now the brothers, now the Adams, were accused of doing away with her.

Finally a villager named Duchamp accused the Adams of having killed the old woman and burned her body. The Adams house was searched but nothing was found to substantiate the story, which was proved false when her body was found in the forest by a party of hunters. The Adams were the first to identify the body, but despite their protestations of innocence they were thrown into prison.

Convicted of Murder.

At the trial, Duchamp, who had previously sworn that he had witnessed, through a window, the cutting to pieces and burning of the old woman, invented an entirely new story on which the prosecution built the theory that Laurent and Josephine Adam, with their son Justin, then 19, had followed their ex-boarder into the woods and there murdered her.

And with no other testimony, and despite their pitiful appeals for justice, the three were convicted and sentenced, and their three small children were left orphans.

Josephine went from the courtroom to a madhouse, where she soon finished her days. Laurent and his son Justin were taken in chains to the convict colony in French Guiana, where life is such that only the younger and stronger man could survive it.

When Justin returned he devoted 17 years to attempts to have his case reviewed, and the Adam name cleared. But French legal procedure decrees that no case can be appealed unless new facts have been discovered. Justin, with his three orphaned brothers and sisters, appealed in vain to the witnesses to confess the injustice their perjury had caused. At last, tired and broken with the struggle, he, too, was taken to the asylum for the insane.

And now, when the last of the three innocents is dead, the original witnesses against them are becoming conscience-stricken. Some of them have admitted that they were solicited to testify as they did, and say that today they are ready to go on the stand and confess their perjury.

CLARK FORTUNE ESTIMATED AT $50,000,000 TO $150,000,000

Funeral of Former U. S. Senator Will Be Friday and Will Be Private.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Funeral of former United States Senator William A. Clark, who died of pneumonia here Monday, will be simple and private. Services will be held Friday afternoon in the Clark home and attendance will be limited to relatives and a few friends. Burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery, where Clark built a mausoleum several years ago.

Clark's death revived conjecture concerning the size of his fortune, one of the largest in this country. At the office of his private secretary it was said that, so far as is known, neither Clark nor any of his associates ever had attempted to compute his wealth.

Estimates of Mr. Clark's fortune run form $50,000,000 to $150,000,000. In 1900, Henry Clews was quoted as estimating Clark's fortune at $100,000,000. Other estimates made at the same time placed the value of his holdings at $50,000,000.

The United Verde Copper Mine at Jerome, Ariz., which Clark owned, has been called one of the richest mines in the world and is said to have yielded its owner an income in excess of $12,000,000 a year.

ST. LOUIS FIRM GETS FRANCHISE FOR NEW ORLEANS TOLL BRIDGE

Estimated Cost of Proposed Structure Across Lake Ponchartrain Between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co., St. Louis stock and bond brokers, and Watson-Williams of New Orleans have been granted a franchise for construction of a concrete bridge over Lake Ponchartrain in New Orleans, which will provide an outlet for automobile and other vehicular traffic to contiguous sections.

The franchise has been signed by the State Highway Commission and approved by the Governor of Louisiana, said Oliver J. Anderson of Anderson & Co., who returned yesterday from New Orleans. Terms of the franchise, a perpetual one, provided thta the State may purchase the bridge at the end of 20 years.

Estimated cost of the bridge is between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000. The bridge will be six miles long with a five-mile approach on each side. The franchise permits a toll charge of $2.50 to $3.60 for automobiles. The use of ferryboats, whose charges are much higher than the rate fixed for the bridge, is the only outlet to many highways at present. Details of the financing of the bridge project have not been completed and the contract has not been let.

They and Auto Parts Dealer Are Charged With Conspiracy to Embezzle.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 4.—John Williams, director of the State Highway Commission; Earl Crawford, member of the commission, and Victor Goldberg, Indianapolis automobile parts dealer, were indicted today by the Marion County grand jury which has been investigating affairs of the Highway Commission.

Three other men were also indicted, but their names were not made public. In all, 10 indictments were returned against the six men. The charges involve conspiracy to embezzle and grand larceny.

The grand jury investigation was started several months ago following a report by the State Board of Accounts in which it was alleged that the equipment division of the Highway Commission had been wrongfully charged for several thousand dollars' worth of automobile parts.

TWO YEARS IN PENITENTIARY FOR MEMBER OF JOBBING FIRM

Federal Judge Davis today sentenced Samuel Walters, charged with possession of property stolen from an interstate shipment, to two years in the penitentiary, upon his plea of guilty.

At the same time, he continued, for the term, the case against Leslie B. Ollan, president of the Lucille Dress Co., 803 Washington avenue, indicted separately for a similar offense, and dismissed the indictment as to Albert Walters, a brother.

The Walters brothers operated as S. Walters & Co., in the building occupied also by the Ollan company. Their indictment, last January, related to a case of woolens and 275 yards of silk alleged to have been stolen from a Wabash freight platform and car, respectively, last summer.

DYING CONGRESS HASTENED ITS END FOR NEW REGIME

Second Deficiency Bill Stripped of Public Buildings Provision Which Delayed Its Enactment.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Preparing itself quickly for the inauguration ceremonies, the Senate met at 10 o'clock this morning and passed immediately the second deficiency appropriation bill, the last major measure in controversy.

Then came a flood of private bills.

The House occupied itself with minor measures.

As finally passed, the deficiency bill was stripped of the public buildings provisions which had delayed its enactment.

Last Minute Confusion.

There was the usual last minute confusion and bills were jammed through with great rapidity.

After half a dozen private claim bills had gone through the Senate in a general hubbub, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, said he would object to the consideration of any more bills unless procedure could be in order.

Less than 100 members were on the floor when the House convened. In contrast to the Senate confusion there was none of the hubbub that usually marks the close of a Congress.

Five minutes was devoted to the routine of reading of the journal of yesterday's proceedings and then, by a vote of 82 to 3, Senate amendments to the naval omnibus bill were accepted. With nothing to do, the House recessed from 10:15 to 10:30 a. m.

Before the recess, Representative Luce (Rep.), Massachusetts, presented to the House a report, adopted today by the Veterans' Committee, giving the results of a countrywide survey of service hospitals. It said that on the whole the veterans' hospitals "are in excellent shape" and that all cause for complaint had been called to the attention of the Veterans' Bureau.

Disorder in Senate.

Meanwhile, in the Senate, warnings by President Cummins being without effect to restore order, the sergeant-at-arms was requested to "direct" Senators to take their seats.

Much of the confusion was due to the fact that all Senators were seated on the east side under the inaugural seating arrangement.

A last minute effort by Senator King, Democrat, Utah, to get Senate action on his World Court proposal was blocked by Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, one of the irreconcilables on Versailles treaty.

Senator King moved to go into executive session to consider the treaty, but Senator Moses replied to a motion to lay the resolution on the table and a rollicking chorus of "ayes" put it aside.

When the House again was called to order, Representative Garrett, Tennessee, the Democratic leader, made a point of no quorum, allowing the expenditure of another half hour in calling the roll, but the debate continued its grind. Senator Pepper, Republican, Pennsylvania, obtained favorable action on a House resolution for the restoration of the Lee Mansion in Arlington Cemetery.

At 10:47 a. m. the Senate recessed until 11:15 a. m.

The House roll call for a quorum showed 350 members were on hand for the windup.

A series of farewell speeches were delivered by Representatives attending their last session. Representative Barkley of Kentucky, ranking Democrat, on the House Commerce Committee, leading off with a parting address to Chairman Winslow, who was not a candidate for re-election.

Seated on the House floor were three women—Miss Alice Robertson of Oklahoma, a former member; Mrs. Mae Nolan of California, who retired today, and Mrs. Mary T. Norton of New Jersey, who, as a Democrat, will be one of the two women in the next House.

House Cheers for Garner.

Representative Longworth of Ohio took the occasion in the House to make a plea for two-party government. It was Longworth's last address as floor leader, he having been nominated by his party colleagues for Speaker of the next House. He complimented the Democratic leader, Representative Garrett, and gave a glowing send-off to Speaker Gillett, whom he will succeed.

He proposed also three cheers for Representative Garner (Dem.), Texas, who is ill here with pneumonia, and they were given with an enthusiasm that made the halls of the House ring.

HIGH SCHOOL BOY MISSING

NO EXCEPTION IN MEDICAL BILL FOR CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Missouri Senate, However, Declares Measure Does Not Alter Status of Practitioners.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 4.—An amendment to except Christian Science healing from the Missouri medical practices act was defeated in the Senate yesterday, with the adoption of a resolution by Senator Farris, that the amendment was out of order, in connection with a bill by Senator Mitchell to strengthen the medical laws.

The adoption of the resolution came after more than an hour of debate on the Christian Science amendment, which was sponsored by Senator Cave.

It was contended by those opposed to the amendment that it had no place in the medical practice bill because the bill did not alter the laws as regards Christian Science. Other Senators said the bill discriminated against Christian Science healing and that the amendment should be adopted.

The Farris resolution declared it was the sense of the Senate that the medical bill "does not alter, change, or affect the legal status now existing of those persons who believe, teach and practice Christian Science, and for that reason the pending Senate amendment is not germane to the pending bill."

The resolution, Senator Farris said, would make it a matter of record that the Legislature was not intending to discriminate against Christian Science in the medical bill.

Before the adoption of the Farris resolution, Senator Pickett offered an amendment that would have made it a misdemeanor for a Christian Science practitioner to charge for services. This was defeated, 17 to 3. The Mitchell bill was ordered engrossed.

BANKER STABS HIMSELF TO DEATH WITH AN ICE PICK

M. K. Parker, Official of Equitable Trust Co., of New York, Had Suffered Severe Headaches.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Morris Ketchum Parker, vice president of the Equitable Trust Co., son of the late Dr. Wilmard Parker, was found dead in a room of the University Club yesterday. He had stabbed himself in the lung with an ice pick.

According to members of Parker's family and Arthur W. Loasby, president of the Equitable Trust Co., death was the culmination of a series of severe headaches of which he had complained the last few months. His body was found by a valet 25 hours after he had left his apartment house for his office, and three hours after he had been reported missing to police.

Three notes were in the room. One, addressed to R. C. Adams, Parker's assistant at the bank, stated in effect: "This is the best way out of it. Please take care of my wife, Charlotte. The insurance papers and my will are in my desk."

Parker was graduate from Yale in the class of 1901 and began his financial career as a messenger for the bond house of E. N. Halsey & Co. The Equitable Trust Co. engaged him as head of its bond department, then in its infancy, in 1915, and the following year made him a vice president.

HOUSE REPORT ASSAILS 'DISABLED SOLDIERS' LEAGUE

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The special committee that investigated the National Disabled Soldiers' League has reported to the House it was of the opinion that part of the funds raised by the organization had been diverted to improper uses and personal gain.

It was recommended that the Department of Justice be asked to present facts developed by the investigation to a Federal grand jury.

"The committee agrees," the report yesterday said, "that the league has not kept faith with the public in fulfilling the statements which it made in circulating its appeals for funds."

Small Bank Deposits.

The report said that uncontradicted testimony before the committee was to the effect that the proportion of cash contributed in the various pencil campaigns of the organization ranged from 25 to 30 per cent of the full amount received, but the bank deposits of the league disclosed less than 10 per cent cash deposited.

"The committee is of the opinion," the report continued, "that the small amount of cash reported as received from these campaigns would indicate that either the officers or the employes of the league misappropriated a part of these funds and failed to account for them."

As far as the committee could learn, the report said, "the entire management and control of the league is in the hands of Commander John T. Nolan; the treasurer, James F. McCann, and the adjutant, Kenneth D. Murphy.

Membership Unascertained.

"The committee was unable to ascertain the bonafide membership of the organization and it is questionable whether there are any active members except the three above-named officials, and a small coterie depending upon them. Evidence was produced indicating, with the possible exception of a Post in Birmingham, Ala., that there are no active posts in existence."

The report said it had never been proved "to the satisfaction of the committee" that the national adjutant, Kenneth D. Murphy, was in the "armed forces of the United States during any war."

"James F. McCann, the treasurer," it added, "failed to appear before the committee in spite of repeated assurances by the attorney for the league, that he would do so. His personal bank account shows numerous deposits and in January, 1923, the deposits exceeded $1000.

"Evidence given before the committee was to the effect that every so-called national convention held by the league since its inception has been marked by disorders and unpaid bills."

CHECK SYSTEM PROPOSAL IS DUE FOR FRENCH OPPOSITION

Distrust of Banks Extends to Business Houses in That Few Have Accounts.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—A hard task awaits the French Government, which proposes to popularize the use of the check in order to reduce the circulation of bank notes. The average Frenchman is distrustful of checks and everything pertaining to banking. He is satisfied to keep his savings in his famous "woolen stocking" rather than intrust it to strangers. As for accepting a check from a stranger in payment of a debt, that would be regarded as extremely foolish.

Few French business houses have bank accounts. Most of them keep their money in a safe and if they have more than necessary to conduct their business, they either send it to the Government savings bank, which pays them five per cent, or, more commonly, they buy Government or city bonds. Accepting a check, they say, means too much trouble. Even if the customer is known to the firm it would mean sending a trusted clerk to the bank to cash the check. The merchant would rather say to the customer, "Pay me some other time." Sometimes fashionable Paris shops which deal with foreign customers do accept checks, but they are careful to get the check cashed before the goods have been sent to the customer's hotel.

Even Government offices have hitherto been unwilling to accept checks. A well-known American firm with offices in Paris recently sent a draft on a Paris bank to pay its income tax, and the check was returned with a note: "Please send an employe with cash, or send a postal order."

KIEL HEARS ARGUMENTS ON DELMAR RIGHT OF WAY BILL

Takes Matter of Signing or Vetoing Ordinance for Curb Removal Under Advisement.

Mayor Kiel today held a public hearing on the recently passed ordinance which provides for the removal by the United Railways of its curbed right-of-way on Delmar boulevard from Kingshighway to Union boulevard. The Mayor took the matter under advisement, declining to indicate whether he will sign or veto the bill.

Proponents of the ordinance pointed out it had been passed by the Board of Aldermen by a 17-10 vote after numerous public hearings similar to today's. Opponents of the bill asked for a veto, basing their arguments mainly on safety.

Alderman Ralph Ellers and W. D. Walsh and R. Lee Orcutt, business men in the district affected, spoke for the bill. Speakers against it included A. T. Perkins and E. K. Eastham of the United Railways, Oliver T. Remmers of the Safety Council, Alderman Brod of the Traffic Council and representatives of the Jewish Hospital and Masonic Home.

At the point of revolvers they took $6 from two of the men and then forced the proprietor's wife to turn over the contents of the cash register, amounting to $28. They ran out and escaped in an automobile.

Recognition by U. S. Discussed.

TIFLIS, Georgia, March 4.—The question of American recognition of the soviet republics was discussed yesterday by Alexis I. Rykoff, president of the Russian Council of Commissioners, addressing a big assembly. He declared that even if Secretary Hughes' resignation was not connected directly with a change in the policy of the United States toward Russia, it nueverthless coincided with the conclusion of the Russo-Japanese agreement, which was bound to affect America.

DOCTOR CHARGED WITH MURDER OF HIS DAUGHTER

Sister of Colorado Victim Testifies Latter Did Not Have Strength to Administer Poison.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., March 4.—Official investigation into the death of Hazel Blazer, 32 years old, whom disease had stunted and stifled so that she was like an infant in mind and physical strength, was halted momentarily today with a delay in the findings of the autopsy which were to point out the way in which she met death.

The inquest was adjourned yesterday until Thursday by Coroner J. J. Mackin of Englewood, a suburb, where the tragedy occurred, when Dr. W. L. Dennis, Denver pathologist, announced that the pathological examination of the body was not completed.

Meanwhile, the victim's father Dr. Harold E. Blazer, 61, physician and inventor, who was charged yesterday with first degree murder, remains in the Littleton Hospital in a serious condition as a result of his three attempts to kill himself. He is alleged to have chloroformer his deformed daughter to death.

Sister of Victim Testifies.

Mrs. Frances Bishop, sister of Hazel Blazer, testified at the inquest that the victim did not h sufficient physical strength to self-administer the fatal dose.

"We took care of Hazel altogether," Mrs. Bishop testified. "She could not walk nor use her arms or hands and consequently we had to feed her like she was an infant." She said her sister had suffered from a paralytic illness ever since she had been three months old.

The accused father was left alone with his invalid daughter on the day of the alleged slaying, Mrs. Bishop and her husband, Roy E. Bishop, disclosed in their testimony.

Tells of Finding Bodies.

Late last Tuesday afternoon they testified, they found the Blazer house locked and after forcing open a window, discovered the bodies of the deformed daughter and her father on the bed. "I immediately rushed over to Hazel and lifted her from the bed where she was lying with her face buried in a pillow and found that she was without life," declared Mrs. Bishop. "I asked father, who had raised himself on his elbow, what he had done. 'I don't know,' was his reply."

MAN CONFUSES MEANING OF FUMIGATION AND BURNS HOME

Health Officers Arrive After House Is Reduced to Ashes—Owner Is Severely Burned.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 4.—When health officers arrived at the home of Robert Madire at La Place, La., yesterday with the expressed intention of fumigating the house they found only smouldering ashes.

Madire, who has been suffering from jaundice, when told that officers were coming to fumigate his house, thought they were going to burn it, so he spread gasoline about the place and struck a match. In spreading the gasoline Madire got some of it on his clothing and sustained severe burns. He is in a hospital.

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritable membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SCIENTISTS HOPE TO BREAK UP ATOM WITH ELECTRIC POWER

French Look to Feat With Development of Generators That Will Produce Million Volts.

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, March 4.—French scientists believe they will soon be able to disintegrate matter by means of superelectric generators developing a million-volt continuous current. Prof. Darsonval has just presented a new generator to the Academy of Medicine developing 500,000 volts.

This machine already has made possible the resumption of Prof. Jan Perrin's experiments in connection with the constitution of matter. Both men declare the scientific and technical difficulties of obtaining higher tensions are now overcome and that the manufacture of necessary machinery henceforth will be only a matter of cost. A million volts or more will be obtainable, according to Perrin, and then perhaps man will be able to break the atom.

"BUTTERFLY KISS" REJECTED

Blacksmith Held for Threatening Woman Evangelist.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 4.—Because Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, pastor of Angelus temple here, refused to believe that Bell Pendleton, 50-year-old blacksmith, had been divinely chosen to implant on her lips a "kiss from God," Pendleton lost patience and threatened to blow up the temple, according to District Attorney's investigators, who arrested him yesterday.

In a series of 30 letters, beginning last August, the blacksmith is alleged to have explained to the woman evangelist that while living in Wells, Colo., last year, a butterfly alighted on his lips at 2 o'clock one morning and imparted a kiss with instructions to relay it to Mrs. McPherson, whose sermons reach Colorado and other states by radio. Officers said Pendleton had been arrested repeatedly in St. Joseph, Mo., for writing threatening letters. He appeared entirely rational when arrested, they said, but he was removed to the psychopathic ward of the General Hospital for observation.

J. W. DAVIS MAKES TAFT LAUGH

Mentions "Certain Ceremonies" Without a Part for Him.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—John W. Davis took up in the Supreme Court yesterday the practice of the law he dropped last summer when he became the Democratic presidential candidate.

Appearing as counsel for the Cement Manufacturers' Protective Association, he declared the Government's charges squarely brought to issue the question how far manufacturers or producers could go through an association, in the exchange of trade information. After proceeding briefly with his argument, he remarked that it would be cut in half by the court's adjournment. Chief Justice Taft pointed out to the recent candidate that the court would not hear argument today. Davis recalled that, of course, this would not be possible because of certain "ceremonies tomorrow in which I shall not be called upon to participate." The Justices joined spectators in the laughter.

Sore Throat? Use Turpentine

Turpentine is the quickest relief for sore throat. When rubbed on the throat it penetrates right through the pores into the inflamed inner tissues. It drives out the wastes and congestion. It releases healing vapors as soon as it is warmed by the internal heat. And it attracts fresh, healing blood to the throat. However, raw Turpentine burns and smarts and its smell is objectionable. So the burn and smell have been "refined out" without affecting its healing qualities. The refined product is known as "Turpo—the Turpentine Ointment." For relief, so quick that it will be a revelation to you, get a 25c or 50c jar of Turpo from any druggist.

HOUSE INDORSES WORLD COURT

Declares Readiness to Vote Funds Necessary to American Participation.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The World Court protocol and American adherence to it has been overwhelmingly approved by the House of Representatives. Acting on a resolution introduced by Representative Fish (Rep.) of New York the House yesterday went on record for the court by a vote of 301 to 28.

Debate for the resolution was led by Representative Burton (Rep.) of Ohio, who said the time had come when we should no "longer hear the talk about the great and the strong on the one hand and the small on the other."

By voicing its approval of the World Court, the House demonstrated its right to express an opinion on foreign relations, and indicated its intention of making the necessary appropriations should the United States join. It clears the way for Senate action.

Burton admitted the World Court is the child of the League of Nations, but insisted it was a separate organization, removed from a political body just as all judicial bodies should be removed.

The 28 men voting against the resolution were:

Republicans — Beck (Wis.), Brandon and Cable (Ohio), Campbell (Pa.), Fairchild (N. Y.), Hill (Me.), James (Mich.), King (Ill.), Lampert (Wis.), McFadden (Pa.), Morgan (Ohio), Nelson Wis.), Schafer (Wis.), Sinclair (N. D.), Thompson (O.), Tinkham (Mass.), Voight (Wis.). Total, 17.

Democrats—Black and Boylan (N. Y.), Collins (Miss.), Connery (Mass.), Cullen (N. Y.), Deal (Va.), Lindsay (N. Y.), Mead (N. Y.), Tague (Mass.), Thomas (Ky.). Total, 10.

Farmer-Labor—Wefald (Minn.). Total, 1.

Text of Resolution.

The resolution reads:

"Whereas, A World Court, known as the Permanent Court of International Justice, has been established and is now functioning at The Hague, and,

"Whereas, The traditional policy of the United States has earnestly favored the avoidance of war and the settlement of international controversies by arbitration or judicial processes, and,

"Whereas, this court in its organization and development promises a new order, in which controversies between nations will be settled in an orderly way, according to principles of right and justice;

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the House of Representatives desires to express its cordial approval of the said court and an earnest desire that the United States give early adherence to the protocol establishing the same, with the reservations recommended by President Harding and President Coolidge.

"Resolved, further, that the House expresses its readiness to participate in the enactment of such legislation as will necessarily follow such approval."

Colorado Legislature Indorses World Court.

DENVER, Colo., March 4.—By a vote of 41 to 16 the Colorado House of Representatives adopted a Senate resolution asking the United States Senate to approve American participation in the permanent court of international justice.

TAKE SALTS IF STOMACH ISN'T ACTING RIGHT

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather ferments, the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyperacidity, meaning there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest; we belch up gas; we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink it while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief often follows the first dose, it is important to help neutralize the acidity, removing the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used for many stomach disorders with excellent results.

DOWNFALL OF PIKERS CLINCHES BASKET PENNANT FOR KANSAS

Washington Plays Ragged Game and Kansas Aggies Put on Whirlwind Finish

St. Louisans Display Worst Form of the Season in Crucial Contest—Team Now in Third Place but Has Chance to Regain Second by Winning Three Remaining Contests.

By Arthur Schneff.

The University of Kansas basketball team, by remaining idle while the Kansas Aggies defeated Washington University at the Coliseum last night, gained their fourth consecutive Missouri Valley Conference championship. The Jayhawks have won 14 games and lost one. They have one game yet to play with Washington next week, but that will not affect the championship.

The Aggies, in defeating the Pikers by a 31 to 26 score, were placed in an ironic situation. The Aggies are ancient rivals of the Jayhawks, and would rather see any team in the conference but Kansas win the title. It was the Aggies who momentarily halted Kansas' march toward the title by administering to the Jayhawks their only defeat of the season, and last night, so luck would have it, their victory clinched the lead for the Jayhawks.

The Pikers did not have one excuse for their defeat. They played worse basketball than they have shown all season. The shooting was inaccurate, the guarding was extremely ragged and their passing game, which has gained them a reputation in the valley for brilliance, was woefully wild and inaccurate.

Piker Stars Out of Form.

When Big Paul Weil, Washington's stellar back guard, literally presents the ball to an Aggie shooter to score a basket, and when Capt. Wiley Cox, probably the best allround player in the conference, makes three wild passes far out of the court, it becomes apparent that the Pikers are off form. And such things happened last night.

Despite their slovenly playing, the Pikers managed to hold the Aggies to a 20-20 tie during the first period. And since the Pikers were obviously off form and have been a strong "second half" combination all season, Coach Don White's players were expected to hit their stride during the second period.

But in the second period the Washington team went completely to pieces. Their attack was ineffective and gained but six points on three field goals, which is far from the Pikers' usual pace. And the defense cracked, the Aggies converting the closing minutes of the game into a run away.

Aggies Go at Top Speed.

While the Pikers were playing in that fashion, the Aggies sped along at the top of their game. The visitors seemed to gain confidence from Washington's poor playing during the first half and came back in the second period with a rush to gain the lead with three successive field goals. They were never stopped after that. They played a fast, steady game, using clever formations to gain a scoring position, and showing strength on the defense.

In Bunker and Byers, the Aggies showed a fine pair of forwards. These players never missed a reasonable scoring chance, and frequently sank the ball from difficult angles. Each scored seven baskets, but Bunker led the scoring with 18 points by adding two foul throws to his total.

Washington's record is now 10 victories and three defeats. Although the Pikers are out of the championship race, they still have a chance to regain second place, which they lost to Nebraska last night. The Pikers depart tomorrow for Lincoln, where they play Nebraska Friday. The next night Washington meets the Aggies again at Manhattan and on Monday finishes the season against Kansas at Lawrence.

Baker Knocked Out Twice in His First 'Pro' Bout

Joe Baker, proclaimed five days ago the most impressive amateur heavyweight developed in St. Louis in a score of years, reached out into the professional field last night, took a left hook on the jaw and sank into oblivion. He was actually knocked out twice in four rounds.

At Scott Field, before a crowd of 1000 persons, Baker appeared in the final bout of the evening against Jack Adams, attached to the aviation service. In the first round the men boxed cleverly, Baker gaining a slight edge through his use of a straight left to the head.

In the second round, Adams, a quick, short puncher who can give and take, slammed a right to Baker's head and the former amateur champion hit the floor. Referee Walter Heisner counted over Baker who raised to one knee, apparently waiting to rise at "9." However, he failed to get up at "10." Technically, he was out, but he protested that, because of the din of yelling spectators, he failed to hear the count. Adams graciously agreed to permit Baker to continue, with the referees permission.

In the fourth, Baker continued to lead but Adams was strong and returned punch for punch. Baker appeared certain to win when suddenly Adams hooked a short left to Baker's chin and the St. Louis lad collapsed. This time there was no doubt about the count.

HEAVYWEIGHTS—Jack Adams, Scott Field, knocked out Joe Baker, St. Louis, four rounds.

Lester Bell Has Won a Regular Job With Cards, Rickey Announces

Recruit Who Led Association Batters Last Year, Will Be in St. Louis Infield When Season Starts April 14, Manager Says—Team Must Find a New Lead-Off Man.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

STOCKTON, Cal., March 4.—Manager Branch Rickey of the Cardinals has waxed so enthusiastic over Infielder Lester Bell that he has already announced that the Rogers Hornsby of the American Association will be in the Knot Holers' lineup when the National League season opens April 14.

"I haven't decided on my line-up and I don't know where Bell will play, but he'll be on the infield some place," said Rickey.

The former Milwaukee star has been hitting the ball hard in the practice sessions and Rickey, always fond of hitters, has come out early with the statement that Bell will be in his lineup. He has been playing shortstop, and if he fields capably he will be retained at that place. But if he shows a slump in the defensive play at that position it is Manager Rickey's intention to shift him to third base.

New Lead-Off Man Needed.

Until Ray Blades came up with a lame arm Monday, Rickey had decided on four positions in his batting order. It had been his intention to use Blades as his lead-off man, but with Blades now on the shelf it means that someone else must be found to head the batting list. The others who have cinched their jobs in the batting order are the peerless Hornsby, who will again hit in third place, and Jimmy Bottomley, who will bat fourth. According to Rickey, Bell will hit in fifth place. With this combination in good working order to drive in runs it means that the opposing pitcher is going to face a "murderers' row." There may be no letup as, after the pitcher passes Bell, Ralph Shinners or "Chick" Hafey and others who may hit after Bell, have reputations as hitters.

Toporcer in Line.

Two new players who have not yet donned uniforms this season must also be considered as candidates for the batting order. They are George Toporcer, the bespectacled infielder, and Taylor Douthit, outfielder. Toporcer, who has been a holdout, has wired Rickey that he will arrive in Stockton Friday. This means that "Specs" has decided to crawl out of his shell and come into the fold at the club's terms.

Douthit's parents and employers had apparently succeeded in inducing him to turn his entire attention to a business career. He wanted to play baseball, but felt that he should pay heed to the advice of his parents. Douthit yesterday telephoned Rickey that he would be here today.

Douthit is a great fielder and in the minor leagues he has hit well. He has hitting form but in the few games he has played as a Cardinal he has broken down no fences. The return of Toporcer to the field means third base competition for Howard Freigau. Toporcer played something like 18 games at the hot corner last year and performed like a demon. Then he got hurt. But because of the good form he showed there in the handful of games last year he must be given consideration.

Hafey Returns to Camp.

"Chick" Hafey returned to camp yesterday and reported himself as feeling better after a short visit to his home. The tall outfielder is about 20 pounds under weight.

The practice session yesterday started at 11 o'clock in the morning and the last man did not leave the field until 5 o'clock. Luncheon was served at the ball park in order that it would be unnecessary for the players to go to the hotel for the midday meal.

There was a long session of batting, after which two teams went at it for four or five innings. Bill Hallahan, who was as wild as a March hare in Sunday's game against Sacramento, was unhittable and had control of his pitches.

The Cardinals will take on Doan's Indians, the independent champions of Stockton, in today's practice tilt. Rickey expects to use all his infielders and outfielders.

Browns Prepare For Game With Brooklyn Team

Sisler's Regulars Will Have Six Days to Practice for Contest March 11.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla., March 4.—With regulars scheduled to arrive on an early train this morning, Manager Sisler today will start a strenuous campaign to get his men in shape for the opening game one week from today. The Browns will tackle the Brooklyn team of the National League, the contest being scheduled for this city at the newly built park. On Saturday, March 14, the Browns will pay a visit to Clearwater, where a return engagement will be played against the Dodgers.

Starting with practice today, the regulars have six days in which to get their eyes on the ball and their arms and legs in shape. Manager Sisler is of the opinion that with good weather prevailing throughout that time he will not experience any great difficulty in getting his squad into condition to make a good showing against the National Leaguers.

Pitchers Well Advanced.

The regulars will find a large array of pitching talent when they step out of the clubhouse for their first practice of the season. There are 14 hurlers, all shapes and sizes, right-handers and left-handers, who are in condition to pitch fairly good ball. Ken Williams, Johnny Tobin, Gene Robertson and Herschel Bennett will find a quartet of southpaw flingers to face.

Manager Sisler yesterday again sent his entire string of hurlers to the hill for lengthy workouts, with the exception of George Blaeholder. Blaeholder has a severe cold and he was instructed to remain indoors. The weather was a trifle cooler than it had been on any of the preceding days since last Thursday, when the squad arrived in this city.

Catchers Need Help.

Catching 14 pitchers proved to be too much of a job for Tony Rego and Ray Cahill, the latter a scout for the Browns. Cahill Monday was about down as a result of the hard work, catching in turn about four hurlers and then warming up another squad while Rego relieved him.

Severeid is here, but it is contrary to an unwritten law among ball players for the veteran receiver to go behind the plate in practice work. Because Rego and Cahill are being overworked a local youngster has been hired to help out. Cecil Toye is his name and the young man had plenty of real exercise yesterday.

Joe Bush again won the long-distance hitting honors by cracking two drives to the deepest corner of center field. Joe was aiming for the fence and he says that he feels sure he will be able to put a few drives over the wall before the team breaks camp March 29. The two decidedly long drives were made against "Spot" Falk, the tall left-hander from Texas University. Bush sent quite a few hits over the left-field wall and his roommate, Milton Gaston, did likewise.

Sisler Pounds the Ball.

George Sisler poled out a homer over the right-field wall and he also hit the fence a number of times with line drives. Sisler looked very good at bat his first day out last Thursday and he has continued the excellent work. It seems safe to say at the present time that Sisler is all set for a far greater season than he experienced last year.

EARLY BILLIARDS IN AMERICA.

Chapter IX.

Whereas it is difficult to obtain conclusive data relative to the origin of the game of biliards, it is quite impossible to discover when and by whom the game was introduced into America.

It is recorded, without substantiating evidence, that the Spaniards, under De Soto, brought the game to Florida at about 1540. However, the English cavaliers who first settled Virginia in 1607 are also said to have played the game, as are also the Huguenots who colonized in South Carolina in 1690.

Whether anyone of these claims be founded in truth it is difficult to say, but the game certainly made very slow strides and gained no recognition generally until as late as 1800.

The only tables in use in New York as late as 1808 were the English six-pocket tables, and it is said that these were imported for the use of officers of the British army before the Revolution.

English Game in Vogue.

Thus, the game in this country date officially from about 1800.

The English style of "winning and losing hazards" (a combination of caroms and pocketing the balls) was played in this country until as late as 1873.

The carom game, however, had found favor with the best American players and in 1860 Dudley Kavanagh of New York won the first professional tournament. The games were played with four balls, one red and three white. This style of game came to be known as the American four-ball game.

Prior to Kavanagh, Michael Phelan, a native of Ireland, had established such supremacy in both the English hazard and the carom game that he has been dubbed the "Father of Billiards in America." He won no championship title, but he was regarded as the best player in the country from 1859 to 1862.

First Championship.

The first formal professional championship was won by Dudley Kavanagh in June, 1863, in a tournament conducted at New York in which eight players, representing Philadelphia, New York, Detroit, Cincinnati and Rochester participated.

Four-ball gradually gave way to three-ball caroms (still on a four-pocket table). Both games were played during the period running from 1862 until 1873 when the four-ball game disappeared as a championship style of play.

As early as 1865 an international match at the three-ball game was played in New York between Dudley Kavanagh, champion of America, and Pierre Carmé of France. The Frenchman won, 250 points to 244. The match was played on a table without pockets and was, in fact, the French carom game.

From that time on, the French three-ball carom became the popular game in this country and, with various minor changes usually designed to make the game more difficult, it has survived to the present day.

Last Night's Fights

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Young Stribling, Georgia school boy, had the best of Dan O'Dowd, Boston, in a 10-round match, according to newspapermen at the ringside. Stribling was the aggressor throughout.

HARTFORD, Conn.—"KO" Phil Kaplan of New York knocked out "Rocky" Smith of Battle Creek, Mich., in the eleventh round of their scheduled 12-round bout here. Kaplan weighed 149½ pounds and Smith 152.

SEATTLE, Wash. — Doc Snell, Tacoma featherweight, knocked out Dandy Dick Griffith of Fort Worth, Tex., in the second of a scheduled six-round affair. A right hook to Griffin's chin shortly after the second round started sent him to the canvas for the count.

FOUR BROWNIES ON LIST OF HOLDOUTS

Four members of the Browns are holdouts, if failure to have their signed contracts in the club safe puts them in that category. Marty McManus, Dave Danforth, Bill Jacobson and Leo Dixon are the athletes who are not yet in the fold.

McManus wants a larger increase than the club has offered. Danforth, who finished the season poorly, but who had a good record despite the weak finish, also refused to accept the terms offered. Dixon, the catcher obtained from St. Paul in a four-for-one trade, is holding out for a share of the purchase price and a better contract.

Bill Jacobson motored to Florida from his home in Moline, Ill., and it was reported that he was in camp. However, he is not yet at Tarpon Springs and Business Manager Bill Friel said this morning that his signed contract had not been received.

COLISEUM UNABLE TO GRANT APRIL 9 DATE FOR NURMI APPEARANCE

Although James Solari of the Business Men's Athletic Association has obtained a sanction for an indoor track meet here, at which it is proposed to have Paavo Nurmi appear, indications this morning were that the promoters would have to abandon their efforts to show the great Finn here.

Manager Bates, who is in charge of the Coliseum, told the Post-Dispatch that April 9 was not available for the track meet promoters because of the difficulty of taking up the floor in time to permit the Police Circus to open the following day.

James Solari, representing the Business Men's Athletic Association, said that he had written Nurmi to find if the runner could include St. Louis in his itinerary with April 9 as the date. Solari had received no reply from Nurmi's manager last night.

Telegrams from New York state that Nurmi has not approved an April 9 appearance here and he had not up to last night received any proposal for that date. Associated Press dispatches this morning stated that Nurmi's latest plan was to close his indoor campaign on March 17 and take a long rest.

CENTRAL WALLOPS ST. LOUIS U. HIGH

Central High basketball team stormed through the St. Louis U. High combination yesterday and carried off a lop-sided victory. The score was 18 to 3.

Central opposes Yeatman in the High School League double-header Saturday evening at Cleveland High. Soldan and Cleveland, both of which have failed to seriously threaten Central's lead, will meet in the second game.

vanagh, Michael of Ireland, had established such supremacy both the English hazard and the carom game that he has been dubbed the "Father of Billiards in America." He won no championship title, but he was regarded as the best player in this country from 1859 to 1862.

First Championship.

The first formal professional championship was won by Dudley Kavanagh in June, 1863, in a tournament conducted at New York in which eight players, representing Philadelphia, New York, Detroit, Cincinnati and Rochester participated.

Four-ball gradually gave way to three-ball caroms (still on a four-pocket table). Both games were played during the period running from 1862 until 1876, when the four-ball game disappeared as a championship style of play.

As early as 1865 an international match at the three-ball game was played in New York between Dudley Kavanagh, champion of America, and Pierre Carme of France. The Frenchman won, 250 points to 244. This match was played on a table without pockets and was, in fact, the French carom game.

From that time on, the French three-ball carom became the popular game in this country and, with various minor changes, usually designed to make the game more difficult, it has survived to the present day.

COLISEUM UNABLE TO GRANT APRIL 9 DATE FOR NURMI APPEARANCE

Although James Solari of the Business Men's Athletic Association has obtained a sanction for an indoor track meet here, at which he proposed to have Paavo Nurmi appear, indications this morning were that the promoters would have to abandon their efforts to show the great Finn here.

Manager Bates, who is in charge of the Coliseum, told the Post-Dispatch that April 9 was not available for the track meet promoters because of the difficulty of taking up the floor in time to permit the Police Circus to open the following day.

James Solari, representing the Business Men's Athletic Association, said that he had written Nurmi to find if the runner could include St. Louis in his itinerary with April 9 as the date. Solari had received no reply from Nurmi's manager last night.

Telegrams from New York state that Nurmi has not approved an April 9 appearance here and had not up to last night received any proposal for that date. Associated Press dispatches this morning stated that Nurmi's latest plan was to close his indoor campaign on March 17 and take a long rest.

Heavy Punches Win for Sansone Over Paul Lang

One district champion was outpointed and another was forced to extend himself to win the decision in the feature events of the Western A. A. U. boxing program at the South Broadway A. C. last night.

Mike Sansone, the flyweight titleholder, found Paul Lang a sturdy foe who boxed better than the champion and rallied repeatedly from trip-hammer punches. One knockdown in the first round and three more in the third round won for Sansone.

Harry Durso, who has been bowling over the 108 pounders with regularity, ran against too many gloves and lost the decision to Louis Kosloff.

WALTER JOHNSON SIGNS TWO-YEAR CONTRACT

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., March 4.—With the signing of Walter Johnson, only Peckinpaugh, Reuther and Ogden remain to come to terms before the entire roster of the world's champion Washington Senators will be under contract.

After giving all matters due consideration the big pitching ace chose the two-year offer in preference to the contract calling for one year.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Hoppe Not Through.

WHEN Willie Hoppe finished fourth in the international balkline tournament at Chicago he broke one of his own records —that for number of defeats suffered in a title event. Willie lost three times, something unheard of in his long career.

The nearest approach in Willie's record that we can recall occurred in the tourney wherein Jake Schaefer first defeated Willie for the crown. Willie lost one game in the tournament, then. But he suffered a second defeat in the play-off, which was not really a part of the regular event, but an extension thereof.

Willie's many friends may have the glooms now; but the great player is not THROUGH by many years. Billiard players do NOT cease to function at 40. That great French master, Vignaux, from whom Willie won his first title more than 20 years ago, remained an outstanding figure in the balkline world until nearly 70 years of age.

His Invisible Foe.

WILLIE once was asked, so his biographer relates in a book on Willie's career, how long he expected to remain at the head of the billiard players of the world.

"There's an old party who attends all my tournaments," answered Willie. "I never see him, but I know he's there. He even stands beside me when I'm chalking my cue and lots of times, when I'm under a strain, I seem to hear him whispering to me. If you want to know how long I'll be champion find this old fellow and ask him."

"Why, who is he?" asked the astonished interrogator.

"Father Time," answered Hoppe, smiling.

Willie explained this once to a Post-Dispatch reporter. Years are bringing a waistline to Willie, which means he is handicapped in shooting. Last night it broke up a run when he missed a shot for which he had to stretch.

"I have to train to keep down in weight and up in health, and training grows wearisome with years. My arms tire under shots involving straining and weaken the delicacy of my stroke," said Hoppe.

Personally we think what beat Willie this year was neither Father Time nor a waistline, but too much three-cushion billiards and too promiscuous exhibition playing.

Then and Now.

THE new billiard champion is not only a "chip off the old block"—Old Jake—but he's a bigger block than "the wizard" himself. Young Jake has completely outstripped his father, in performance.

At no time in his career did the Wizard of other days show the billiards displayed by his son at the Chicago tournament. A high run of 400 from the spot, a grand average for the tourney of above 57 and a high single average of 400 are figures utterly beyond the billiards of the day of Ives and the elder Schaefer.

Then, if a long match or a tournament saw the winner achieve a grand average of 30 it was the exception.

Right Where It Hurt.

HOPPE, young Jake Schaefer and Charley Peterson were touring in cue exhibitions. Pete, from whom even Hoppe himself was not averse to taking tips on playing the game, undertook to correct young Jake's "bridge" for a draw shot. Jake was then young and upstage.

"Hold the cue this way, Jake, and shoot thus and so," Pete explained.

Young Jake lifted himself haughtily from his crouch over the table and glowered at Pete.

"Where do YOU get off, telling ME how to shoot billiards?" Jake angrily demanded. "Guess I know how to play the game."

"I just thought I would show you how your father taught me to do it," said Pete with a grin; and young Jake folded up.

A few months later Pete had the satisfaction of seeing young Jake use that bridge in a championship tournament.

Use of Intoxicating Liquors Barred by Cleveland Official

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., March 4.—Circular letters forbidding use of intoxicating liquors and requiring players to be in their rooms by midnight have been mailed by the Cleveland baseball club to all players on its roster. The rules recently adopted at a stockholders' meeting will be rigidly enforced throughout the season, President F. S. Barnard said today.

The poor showing of the Indians the past two seasons is believed by Barnard to have been caused by players breaking training rules.

BASKETBALL PROTEST DISMISSED BY SHELLS

Manager James Kelly of the Shell team of the Municipal Basketball League today dismissed his protest against a member of the Leacock team. He had alleged that one or more of the Leacock players had participated in an unauthorized game at Centralia, Ill.

Strike Vote on Santa Fe in West.

By the Associated Press.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., March 4.—Taking of a strike vote among members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen on the Santa Fe coast lines is in progress today, according to statements of members of that organization. The firemen met in a closed session last night and no statement was issued. The situation results from the demand of the men for a 5 per cent increase, which was recently put into effect by the Southern Pacific. The Santa Fe is understood to be willing to sign a new contract, provided the men will make certain concessions in working conditions now in effect. The firemen have refused to grant these concessions.

NO FURTHER BOND INQUIRY, IS EDICT OF LONGWORTH

Republican Leader Characterizes Committee Report on Duplications "as No Report at All."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Possibility that a House Investigating Committee might be authorized to prolong its inquiry into charges of irregularity at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing was dissipated with the announcement by Representative Longworth, the Republican leader, that such authority would not be granted.

A majority of the committee in a report submitted Monday said it was advisable that the investigation be extended and that a comprehensive audit be made of the public debt.

Longworth declared yesterday that the majority report signed by one Republican and two Democrats was "no report at all, but an attack on the Treasury Department without giving the Treasury any opportunity to answer charges against it." He also had been informed an audit of the public debt would cost about $50,000,000.

He said no opportunity would be given in the House today for committee members to ask for an extension of the inquiry.

Secretary Mellon earlier in the day had written a letter to President Coolidge reiterating his denial that there had been widespread fraudulent duplication of Government bonds, and asserting that "the accusers" of the Treasury were still "as far from proving their charges as they were in 1920."

Mellon Makes Statement.

In addition to the letter in which he informed the President that further consideration of the charges was unnecessary, Mellon supplemented his views with a personal statement from the Treasury, declaring the committee's report had failed to present "a single item of evidence of the duplication" and added that the same was true of the four-year-old investigation.

Replying to statements in the report that duplicate numbers of bonds had been issued; that is, two bonds of the same number, Mellon said such could easily occur through mechanical or clerical errors and that such numbers would not constitute fraud in the view of the Treasury.

"Of course," the Secretary continued, "if the United States received pay for two bonds bearing the same number there is no duplication of debt. Yet the existence of two bonds with the same number is all the majority of the committee have for their sensational charges."

HOTEL BARS HIGH SCHOOL 'FRATS' FOR DRUNKENNESS

Manager of New York Hostlery Tells Party When He Had to "Freeze" Dancers Out.

NEW YORK, March 4. — High school fraternities are getting too wet for the Hotel Belleclaire, according to Walter Guzzardi, president of that hostelry, who announced last night that, "for the time being at least," the Belleclaire must turn down all requests for reservations from "school and college fraternities and class organizations."

Guzzardi told of a dance held at the Belleclaire by a high school fraternity, at which the management had to order waiters to open the windows and "freeze" the dancers out, besides calling a policeman.

Guzzardi said four youths "had to be carried privately from the hotel through a rear entrance." Fixtures were torn from the place and numerous other "acts of vandalism" committed, he said. In booking this affair, Guzzardi said, officers of the fraternity said its headquarters were on Prospect Park West, Brooklyn. Presumably its members attend one of the big Brooklyn high schools.

All this and more, Guzzardi blames on the "growing tendency on the part of high school girls as well as boys to carry hip flasks."

OPERATION OF SLOT MACHINES IN COUNTY IS CONDEMNED

Letters Sent by Clean Election League to Pastors and County, Parent-Teachers' Associations.

Letters condemning the operation of slot machines in St. Louis County have been sent to pastors of county churches, officers of the county Parent-Teachers' Association and members of the Clean Election League, by the latter organization.

The letters contain copies of an editorial recently printed in a St. Louis County newspaper in which a mother is quoted as saying that her four children spent all their lunch money in playing a slot machine in a candy store near a county school until the store was raided and the machine seized. Co-operation is asked in ridding the county of slot machines and other gambling devices.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TORONTO, March 4.—Three ugly words have persistently recurred in the literature of Canada during the last three months—secession, separation, annexation.

Secession refers to a possible break up of the Canadian Confederation into its component parts. Separation to a possible breaking away of Canada from the British Empire, and annexation to a possible political union with the United States.

Drastic, even revolutionary proposals, each of these. Yet on the writer's desk lies a pile of clippings, an inch thick, taken from a few Canadian papers discussing one or other of these alleged remedies for current ills. It is true that practically all of the clippings are denunciations of the proposals. But why are they necessary? What does it all mean?

Interests Widely Separated.

Secession talk has two sources, one in the Atlantic Provinces, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, the oldest British communities in Canada, the other in the new Prairie Provinces of the west. The problem of the Atlantic Provinces has always been difficult. They constitute a community, isolated as far as markets and communications are concerned and yet adjacent to the rich opportunities of the Atlantic States and Central Canada whose lure makes a continuous drain on the young and enterprising elements in the population. Nova Scotia, notoriously, entered the confederation (and the Confederation of Canada is less than 60 years old) only under pressure. Thirty years ago when Mr. Fielding was Premier of the province a resolution advocating secession was adopted. But nothing came of it. Since then, while there has been almost continuous agitation for "better terms" all talk of secession has been quiescent.

Feeling of Unity in West.

In Western Canada secession gossip was crystallized by a speech made a few weeks ago by R. A. Hoey, M. P., a leading member and a prospective leader of the Progressive party. Mr. Hoey's speech has been widely discussed and it is worth while setting down the actual terms of his reference to a possible break up of the Canadian Confederation. He said: "I feel that the time is ripe for a united West, with a national program which will recognize the prairie provinces and the Maritime Provinces as part of the Dominion and recognize that these sections will not indefinitely remain in the confederation to be dominated by the mid-Eastern interests.

"Ambassadorial representation in Washington at once to work out the closest possible trade relationship between Canada and the United States.

"A fiscal policy based on the needs of the treasury rather than on the policy of protection.

"Immediate completion of the Hudson Bay Railway.

"A national policy to take into account the legitimate claims of all other sections of the dominion.

"I would send to Ottawa the best men in Western Canada to advocate this policy. If confederation can't be maintained on that basis I can't see any reason for maintaining it. If we don't maintain it we can cut ourselves off, and the East can have all the protection it wants, while the West can have a fiscal policy to conform to the desires of its own heart. If confederation can't be preserved on this basis of equity and justice, why this camouflage? Why maintain it on a basis of injustice and discrimination?"

The Manitoba Free Press says: "The people of Canada, we are assured, have no intention of permitting either stupid reactionaries or restless radicals to endanger confederation. They will neither tolerate standpat and selfish policies which breed disunion, nor venture on wild expedients to overcome difficulties. The country is looking for sane, progressive and moderate leadership in politics, in transportation, in finance and in commerce; and we do not think so poorly of the people as not to believe that it will be forthcoming."

Newspapers Fight Question.

Respecting separation of Canada from the British Empire, recent discussion is inspired and centers about an editorial in the London Morning Post which professed to discover an alleged tendency in Canada towards imperial secession. The Morning Post is worried by Canada's halibut treaty with the United States; by the proposed appointment of a Canadian Ambassador at Washington; by Premier King's negotiation without consulting Britain for a new treaty of disarmament on the Great Lakes; by the abolition of imperial fleet in Canada; by Canada's inability to attend the proposed

BREAK-UP OF CANADA NOW BEING DISCUSSED AS UNREST IN THE DOMINION GROWS

Respecting separation of Canada from the British Empire, recent discussion is inspired and centers about an editorial in the London Morning Post which professed to discover an alleged tendency in Canada towards imperial secession. The Morning Post is worried by Canada's halibut treaty with the United States; by the proposed appointment of a Canadian Ambassador at Washington; by Premier King's negotiation without consulting Britain for a new treaty of disarmament on the Great Lakes; by the abolition of imperial [illegible] in Canada; by Canada's inability to attend the proposed March imperial conference and so on.

Annexation Gossip Evasive.

Annexation gossip is the most intangible of all. Speaking recently on the same night but to different audiences the Prime Minister of Canada and Sir Arthur Curie, principal of McGill University, agreed in deploring "current talk of annexation." H. C. Hocken, a Toronto M. P., at a party meeting referred to the rumor that was being circulated in the Western Provinces to the effect that annexation to the United States was Canada's only salvation. But Western newspapers are a unit in denying that there is any advocacy of annexation in their territory.

The fixed opposition of French Canada to any suggestion of a political merger with the United States is reflected in the French Canadian press. "An absurd theory," says Le Canada. "We will have nothing to do with anexation," says La Patrie. "We laugh a little at the innocence of certain Americans who think it is on the way." The Toronto Mail and Empire charges that the policy of the King Government, "matching well as it does with United States policy," tends toward annexation. "In other words," retorts the Toronto Globe, "the charge is actuated by partisan motives and will be credited only by partisans of the most rabid kind." Foreseeing that the issue may be injected into the next election campaign, the Globe adds: "It may be an ugly fight, but the responsibility will lie, not with those on whom it is forced, but on those who provoke the quarrel."

It is not surprising that following her war effort Canada should now be in a period of some reaction, suffering from "nerves" and disposed to be "jumpy" about shadows. But those who appreciate what Canada accomplished in a material way in 10 years before the war and who appreciate the nature and magnitude of Canada's contribution in men, money, moral and physical courage to the war itself are assured that the present phase of morbid discussions is but a temporary intellectual exercise.

Annexation Openly Discussed in Canada

Economic and Political Arguments Advanced for Union With U. S.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WINNIPEG, March 2. — The Dominion of Canada—at least a part of it—soon may be asking the United States to annex it. The northern half of the North American continent has been experiencing hard times ever since the war, and when folks are hard pressed for money they generally canvass a number of solutions. Annexation of the four Western provinces —Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia—is openly advocated, while others believe that a deal should be made whereby the United States should take over the entire Dominion.

The United States itself has provided some cause for this state of unrest. Enactment of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill with its 34 cents per bushel duty on wheat, and 1½ cents per pound on beef, cut off from the farmers of Western Canada their most profitable market. Wheat and livestock constitute the main farm produce of this vast, fertile plain, and when the nearest and best market is cut off by a high tariff wall, much of the value of the crop departs. The only other wheat and beef market available to Canada is Great Britain, and ocean freight rates are prohibitive.

The foregoing constitutes the economic reason. There is the political side as well. Canada obtained a new status among nations of the world when her Premier signed the Treaty of Versailles as the head of a nominally self-governing country. England, however, as in the recent case of the Irish Free State, has been loath to recognize the expansion of one of her colonies into a nation, and on several occasions she has attempted to show Canada that she still is a colony.

These hide burnings have served to foment dissatisfaction in Western Canada to such an extent that bloodless revolution is advocated in some quarters. In 1911, farmers of Western Canada voted strongly for reciprocity, and they still believe their only salvation lies in free trade. At present the only way in which they profess to see a remedy is by throwing in their lot with the United States.

Talk of annexation is much stronger in the West than in the East. This may be accounted for by the fact that thousands of former Americans now are farming here. Henry Wise Wood, president of the United Farmers of Alberta, and a power in Western farm councils, is a former Kansan, but so far, largely owing to his official position, Wood has refrained from being drawn into the agitation.

Western Canada is rich in pulpwood, coal, minerals, furs and fish. Millions of acres of fertile, uncultivated land await the coming of the first plow. This territory would be a decided acquisition to a nation whose natural resources are being sadly depleted each succeeding year.

DEATH DUTIES ARE BREAKING UP LARGE BRITISH ESTATES

State Levies Collected From Heirs Sometimes Run as High as 60 Per Cent.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

GLASGOW, Feb. 12.—The great estates of England, Scotland and Ireland are doomed to be done away with eventually owing to the death duties of landowners collected by the state and which sometimes total as high as 60 per cent. The landlords protested vigorously at first, but in vain, and in most cases have resigned themselves to their fate.

Speaking before the Glasgow Conservative Club, where he was entertained on the attainment of his ducal jubilee, the Duke of Montrose said he doubted that the rising generation realized the transition which is taking place in regard to their future.

"We are running very fast in these damocratic times," he said, "and the big estates and ancestral castles which were a feature of my younger days must gradually disappear in virtue of the death duties as they are now assessed. The landlords' rights are being curtailed every day, but nevertheless I cannot help but think that I have lived during the most prosperous time of this old country of ours. Possibly we won't miss the old castles, after all."

To Boost Southern Illinois.

A meeting of a committee, which has been selected by a number of Chambers of Commerce in Illinois towns and cities to perfect plans for a publicity organization to advance the interests of Southern Illinois, will be held tomorrow in Carbondale.

GATE OF THUNDER GOD TO BE REBUILT IN YEDO, JAPAN

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Feb. 21.—Kaminarimon, or Gate of the Thunder God, one of the sights of ancient Yedo, destroyed by fire some 70 years ago, is to be rebuilt. It will be on its old site at the entrance of what is now Asakusa Park and the funds are to be raised by popular subscription through the efforts of the priests of the numerous temples in that neighborhood.

It is planned to spend about $350,000 on the edifice, the design of which has been entrusted to a noted Japanese architect who is an authority on the ancient architecture of the country. It will be of solid vermillion lacquer below the roof. The plan for the reconstruction of Tokio makes the project feasible after years of agitation.

A TOWN WHERE NONE DIES

ROME, Feb. 15.—The Rome Tribuna has discovered "the land where there is no death." It is named Salecchio and lies in the province of Novarra, near the Swiss border, 5000 feet above the sea. For the last three years this pastoral village has had no deaths among its citizens. In 1924 there were no marriages and only one birth. "We are too poor," said the Mayor, "to cultivate vices. We do not drink or smoke. We go to bed early and get up before dawn. There is nothing to steal, so we have no thieves. We have no lawsuits, perhaps because we have no wine." The Tribuna sought an interview with the town doctor and found there were no doctors. Is this, it is asked, the result, or perhaps the cause of Salecchio's good health?

BABY AWARDED BY LOTTERY

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PAALOZALA, Italy, Feb. 10.—A baby boy was recently the capital prize in a lottery arranged by the Mayor of this city. The child was found abandoned in the market place and turned over to the Mayor. Within an hour eight childless couples had sought to adopt the foundling.

The Mayor had difficulty in choosing among the would-be parents. So he arranged to raffle the baby off and allowed tickets to be sold only to persons who would make desirable parents. The tickets brought a good price and all the proceeds of the lottery were turned over to the winners of the child to purchase a layette.

Five Robbers Outwit 200 Guards.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Feb. 10.—Outwitting an armed guard of more than 200 men, five masked robbers the other evening walked into the custom house adjoining the main railroad station and made off with the entire day's receipts, estimated at 2,000,000 leva. The ease with which the robbery was accomplished has caused newspaper comment concerning the facility with which the Government could be overturned by bold adventurers.

The Service of Economical Management

"So far as the use of capital is concerned"—says a Financial Expert in the Chicago Tribune of February 11, 1925—"a cheapening of the product manufactured can be expected only under economies of operation."

The real problem of industry today is not "who owns the capital invested?" but "how is the capital operated?"

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) invites judgment based upon its operation of capital.

This Company's ideal of service is founded upon sound economies of management. It believes that rigid economy alone can enable the Company to manufacture and sell its products at a price which will allow people in all circumstances to use them in increasing quantities.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) believes that capital should be used for the benefit of the greatest number of people — that oil products should be made available to all—that the price of these products must be held down to permit their universal enjoyment.

An oil field is something created by nature—but nature is no economist. She places her products where she finds conditions favorable, with no thought for man's convenience.

Generally oil is found in remote regions—discovered after great risk and rendered accessible and usable only through heavy expenditures of money, and the application of experience, ingenuity, foresight and thrift in the management of industry.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) refines this oil into a multitude of products, which it distributes so widely as to make them of universal benefit to humanity.

The basis of this service is economy. It is a wise economy, too, which from long and seasoned experience dictates when to spend and when not to spend. Thrift rules and waste is not tolerated.

Through this fundamental service the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) operates the capital of its stockholders in such a way as to increase and extend its power to serve humanity.

PROFITS ARE TAKEN LATE IN STOCKS

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Mar. 4.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today says:

"A fresh outburst of profit-taking in the afternoon was the stock market's response to the inaugural address of President Coolidge and a drop in the call money rate to 3½ per cent. President Coolidge's remarks were favorably received, but the tenor of the address was quite in line with general expectations and doubtless was already pretty well discounted by the rise of the past few days. As often happens, profits were taken on the news. Prices were generally higher during the morning, under the lead of further advances in specialties and pool favorites, but the main body of stocks failed to follow through and profit-taking became more pronounced as the day progressed, reaching its crest during the last hour. Good stocks, however, resisted well and although numerous declines of 1 to 3 points dotted the list they took place mostly in issues which have been bid up sharply of late. A feature of the trading was the advance of American Locomotive to a higher price than that of Baldwin. Trading was active but somewhat less so than on the previous day, the turnover being approximately 1,700,000 shares. Bonds were only moderately active and somewhat dull.

Call Money Cheaper.

"A drop in call money from an opening rate of 4¼ per cent to 4 per cent in the morning and then to 3½ per cent in the early afternoon was perhaps assuring as testifying to the plentiful supply of money. The rise to 5 per cent last week was of course, due to the large demands for credit centering around the first of March, and a moderate easing off thereafter was wholly natural. While most factors point to a firming up of money rates the change more than likely will be gradual.

"Foreign exchange quotations were generally higher. Sterling advanced ⅛ of a cent to $4.76½ and French francs recovered 5¼ points to 5.09¼ cents. Other Europeans showed similar gains and Japanese yen sold at a new high price for this movement, gaining ⅛ of a cent at 40 cents. The recovery in francs appeared to be due to a lifting of selling pressure rather than to support. Actual business transacted in the market was moderate. After all, francs at around 5 cents may be more in accord with the actual situation than they were at 5½ cents.

Wheat in Sharp Drop.

"Profit-taking in commodity markets was persistent. Although the majority of the wheat traders expected tonight's report of the Government on farm reserves to be bullish realization sales were sufficient to start the market down and a good many stop-loss orders were uncovered, adding to the decline and the correction of a top-heavy position. May futures dropped 8 cents a bushel to $1.91½ and then recovered 1 cent of the loss, closing at $1.92½.

"Cotton was strong in the early trading, with most deliveries selling at new high levels on the present movement. The bulge induced profit-taking, however, and at a late price of 25.96 May futures were 2 points lower.

New Record for Iron Output.

"The weekly reviews of the iron and steel trade call attention afresh to the distance which the industrial recovery already has covered. Thus pig iron production as the current month began, according to the Iron Age, was at a rate exceeding that of March last year by 3½ per cent. Output in February was larger than that of any other February in the history of the trade. Increased output, however, was accompanied by some weakening in prices. Shipments of finished steel during the past month meanwhile were generally larger than those of last year, especially with the large companies. However, the Steel Corporation received new orders in excess of its shipments and a high rate of operations for at least another month or two seem assured, although some further curtailment from the present high levels is probable.

Bond Market Review

NEW YORK, March 4.—Narrow and irregular price fluctuations marked today's bond dealings, which displayed a tendency to mark time pending a more definite trend to the stock market. The speculative movement in St. Paul Railroad bonds veered upward today as rumors were circulated that Henry Ford might offer financial assistance to the road in connection with its approaching $48,000,000 bond maturity. Other rail liens which advanced a point or so included Katy 4s B and Seaboard 6s. Oil company obligations yielded to the pressure of heavy realizing sales, but later recovered a part of their early losses.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Coffee—Rio, No. 7, 22c; Santos, No. 4, 26⅛c. Futures easy; July, 18.58c; Dec., 17.02c.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, March 3.—The action of Liverpool wheat market, which closed 1½d to 1⅝d lower, on American advance yesterday, caused lower prices here today. Corn was affected by wheat trend.

The decline at Liverpool was credited to an estimate from a British trade authority that wheat consumers' requirements in the United States for the four months from March 1 to June 30 would be only 133,000,000 bushels. The corresponding total last year was 170,000,000 bushels.

May wheat closed but ⅛c from bottom for day, at net loss of 7 cents. July wheat was 5c lower and corn futures 4c off. There was liquidation and stop-loss selling.

In the local cash grain market corn was steady to 3c lower and slow. Oats were ½c to 1c lower, in quiet trade.

Wheat was more than a cent lower at the start and May showed further recession later. Liverpool in afternoon cable was 1⅞ to 2⅛d lower. Winnipeg was fractionally lower early. The action of the English market was prominent factor here.

May wheat broke 7⅛c to $1.90 and then reacted partially. July wheat was off more than 4c after noon. Corn showed about 3c decline at same time of day.

May wheat opened at $1.95⅝@1.96; July wheat $1.68½; May corn $1.31⅝@1.31½; and July corn $1.35@1.35¼.

The Northwestern markets combined had 636 cars of wheat, compared with 673 a week ago and 870 last year. Minneapolis receiving 229 cars, and Winnipeg 407.

Local wheat receipts, which were 117,000 bushels, compared with 96,200 a week ago and 62,400 last year, included 35 cars local and 55 through. Corn receipts, which were 120,400 bushels, compared with 37,800 a week ago, and 120,400 last year, included 74 cars local and 12 through. Oats receipts, which were 154,000 bushels, compared with 66,000 a week ago and 170,000 last year, included 46 cars local and 31 through. Hay receipts were 24 cars local and three through.

Primary receipts of wheat were 724,000 bushels, compared with 506,000 a week ago and 733,000 last year. WEAKNESS AT LIVERPOOL AFFECTS CHICAGO WHEAT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 4.—The bull movement in wheat received a setback today. Weakness in Liverpool was a disagreeable surprise for holders and caused many of the more timid longs to unload their grain. Profit-taking purchases by shorts caused some recovery in the later trade. Corn was affected by the weakness in wheat, but oats apeared to be getting good support after an early setback. Provisions had a strong under current.

Wheat broke sharply in the last hour and closing prices were 2⅝ to 7¼ lower. Stop-loss selling and liquidation found the market temporarily without supoprt: May $1.92¼ to $1.82; July $1.68⅝ to $1.68½; September $1.53½ to $1.53¼. Corn rboke with wheat and closed 4c to 4⅜c lower: May $1.31¼ to $1.31; July $1.33¼ to $1.33; September $1.31⅝ to $1.31½. Oats were ⅝c to 1⅛c lower; May 53⅝c to 53¾c, July 55c to 55⅛c; September 53½c. Provisions weakened with grain, lard closing unchanged to 7½c lower, ribs 5c lower and bellies 7½c lower. Local cash sales were 5000 bushels wheat, 18,000 bu corn, 80,000 bu oats.

As usual, Liverpool proved stubborn and did the reverse of what was expected of it. A decline of 1¼ to 1¾ pence in response to our advances yesterday was certainly a shock to the recently made bulls. There are two explanations for this action. One of theme said that there was liquidation because of Broomhall's estimates of domestic consumption of wheat in the United States in the next four months of 133,000,000 bushels. Other reason seems more plausible and this told of liquidation because of free Argentine offers and the weakness in Argentine exchange. Some buying by shorts for profit was encountered on the break. Export demand continued poor and mills are not taking any wheat in the local market.

Corn was under pressure from the start because of the break in wheat. Some buying on resting orders was met with, but it was not sufficient to hold the decline in check. Country was a free seller of corn to arrive over night and local receivers experienced difficulty in booking all the corn they had offered to them. Kansas City offered No. 2 white corn at 5 cents under May, and No. 2 mixed at 5½ cents under delivered at Chicago. This is the first time that the market has offered white corn and indicates that demand for that description is falling off. Shipping demand was slow.

Oats followed other grains, but good support was noted on the break. A local professional bought most of the oats and there was some commission-house buying on resting orders. Shipping demand was slow.

Provisions showed much strength today. The upturn in hogs and the fact that prices at the yards were the highest of the season led to much buying of an investment character. Realizing sales were not heavy enough to cause any reaction.

From a letter of Mr. Louis B. Woodward, President of the Company, we summarize as follows:

Established in 1865 as a partnership with an initial capital of $2,000, the Company was incorporated under the laws of Missouri in 1887. Growth has been consistent during the past sixty years, and has been entirely from earnings.

From a job printing plant handling the usual run of commercial work, the Company has gradually specialized in label, calendar and other large runs of high-grade color work. Among their clients are numbered many large manufacturers of nationally advertised and distributed merchandise.

These bonds are secured by a closed first mortgage on the real estate, building and all other fixed assets of the Company now owned or hereafter acquired. The balance sheet as of January 31, 1925, after giving effect to this financing, shows total assets of $2,332,374.38, and net current assets of $951,426.31. Earnings applicable to bond interest, after depreciation and taxes at present rates, have averaged $180,045.03 for the past six years. This is three and three-quarters times the greatest annual interest charge, and over twice the average combined annual interest and principal requirement.

Proceeds of this bond issue are being used for the erection of a modern printing plant on Tower Grove Avenue adjacent to the tracks of the Missouri Pacific, St. Louis & San Francisco and Terminal Railroads. This plant will be modern in design, commodious, properly arranged for economical operation and will supply much-needed switching facilities. The present plant at Third and Locust Streets is overcrowded, necessitating the rental of considerable outside warehousing; all materials and products must be hauled to and from the freight depots, and a large force of men is required for the handling of these materials and products.

Conservative estimates indicate the savings on the items of rent, drayage, outside warehousing and labor alone will be sufficient to provide the principal and interest payments of this issue.

All matters pertaining to the legality of this issue have been approved by Messrs. J. F. Lee & Charles M. Polk, attorneys for the Company, and Messrs. Bryan, Williams & Cave, attorneys for the Bankers.

COTTON SELLS OFF AFTER ADVANCE IN MORNING

NEW YORK, March 4.—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 7 to 18 points on a continuation of the recent buying movement promoted by advances in Liverpool, reports of a stronger market for cotton goods, absence of rain in the Southwest and bullish Southern spot advices.

A good deal of realizing and some Southern selling was absorbed on slightest setbacks and the market showed a generally firm tone in early trading, May selling up to 26.25c and October to 25.65c, or 20 to 28 points net higher.

Liverpool reported increased spot sales and with the large business reported in Southern spot markets yesterday probably stimulated buying of old crop positions.

The early afternoon market turned easier on rumors of increased spot offerings or a less active demand in the south, and increased realizing or selling for a reaction. May sold off to 25.94c and July to 25.29c, with the market ruling about 4 to 16 points net lower at 2 o'clock.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

P.-D. READER.—The discoverer of algebra is unknown. It is said that Diophantus wrote it in 170 A. D., and he may have been its inventor. It was brought into Spain in 900. Its signs are said to have been used first in 1544, but algebra did not come into common use until 1590. Descartes applied algebra to geometry in 1637.

JOHN A. S.—Following is a formula for oak stain: Dissolve ¼ part of permanganate of potassium in 1000 parts of cold water and paint the wood with the violet solution obtained. As soon as the solution comes in contact with the wood it decomposes in consequence of chemical action, and a handsome light brown precipitate is produced in the wood. The brush used must be washed out immediately, as the permanganate of potassium destroys animal bristles, but it is preferable to use sponges or brushes of glass threads for staining. Boil 2 parts of cutch in 6 parts of water for 1 hour, stir while boiling so that the rosiniferous catechu cannot burn on the bottom of the vessel; strain the liquid as soon as the cutch is dissolved, through linen, and bring again to a boil. Now dissolve therein 1-5 part of alum, free from iron; apply the stain while hot and cover after the drying with a solution of 1 part of bichromate of potassium in 25 parts of water.

F. K.—Following is one way to clean feathers: Sew together two sheets of light material. Put into this bag the contents of one pillow or enough to be easily handled in a washtub or machine. Have good warm soap suds, then put in your bagged feathers. Rub and shake as you would any piece of soiled goods. Wring out first in clear hot water then in cold, lastly wring out as dry as possible. Stretch your clothes line back and forth about eight inches apart, forming a bridge, where the sun and wind strike freely. Lay your feather bag over the line and during the day keep turning and shaking now and then. If not dry the first day, take into the house over night and repeat next day. When almost dry beat lightly. When dry the feathers are ready to go back into the bag. In the meantime have your pillowcases washed and the feathers are now ready to go back into them, sweet and clean.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

THE GOAT.—You do not say whether or not your wife has made a will. Consult a lawyer.

WILL G.—Your personal property to the amount of $400 is exempt from levy. The money in bank can be reached by attachment or garnishment, however.

ANDREWS.—You can get a peddler's license in the usual way. The law in this State has no provision with regard to an army discharge.

YOURS IN OBLIGE.—The word "straw" is not a legal term, but it is ordinarily used to designate one who holds the title to real estate in his name for someone else.

ILLS.—In Illinois a person can marry immediately after obtaining a divorce. It is safer to wait until the end of the term of court at which the divorce was granted, however.

K. G.—An annuity from an individual, which is bought on an insurance basis, would be exempt from the income tax so far as it was a return of the premium or premiums paid by the annuitant.

OTTO T.—As far as we know, an automobile license cannot be obtained three years in advance. However, you might inquire of the Automobile Club of Missouri 4228 Lindell boulevard.

M. E. G.—You do not have to give him any particular notice unless you agreed to do so. Notify him that you are revoking his authority and notify the tenants also.

BLOSSOM.—As you are behind in your rent, your landlord can sue you out without giving you one month's notice. Neither your furniture nor your mother's could be held for the rent, under the circumstances stated. The landlord could garnishee your wages, or your husband's wages.

R. A. S.—If the American girl married the foreigner after Sept. 22, 1922, when the new law took effect, her marriage does not affect her right to vote. This is true whether she married the foreigner here or in Europe.

MRS. B. W. J.—If he sues you, he can only recover the fair value of his work.

HEARTBROKEN.—If your husband objected to the adoption, the court would probably not allow you to adopt the child.

CHEROKEE.—If he will agree to sell, have the property appraised by some competent person agreed on by you both, and pay him one-fourth of its appraised value.

WORRIED.—The homestead up to a certain value is exempt from levy. Transferring it to your wife's name now would not help you any. You should employ a lawyer to contest the suit.

J. H. S.—He has a good defense to the suit, as he is a minor. He should have a lawyer defend him.

P. R.—One month's written notice, served not later than the day before the rent day, is required in all cases where there is no written lease.

JUPITER. — The tenant must give the landlord one month's written notice, but this has to take effect at the expiration of his month, not in the middle of the month. In your case the tenant could give the landlord notice not later than March 9 that he would vacate on April 10.

P. M.—You will have to fill out an application for naturalization (second papers) and bring two witnesses down to the Naturalization Bureau office, in the Custom House, Eighth and Olive streets. No first papers are necessary and you do not have to wait any length of time. The cost is $4. If you got your paper in time you could vote in the April election. Inquire of the Naturalization Bureau here for information regarding where to apply, if you do not live in St. Louis.

VERY EARNEST—All the courts in St. Louis are supposed to be "Courts of Justice." There are the United States District Court, 16 divisions of the Circuit Court, a number of Justice of the Peace Courts, the City Courts and Court of Criminal Correction, and in addition two Appellate Courts, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and the St. Louis Court of Appeals. Possibly what you want is the Municipal Legal Aid Bureau, which is in the Municipal Courts Bldg., 14th and Market streets.

ST. LOUIS MINISTER'S SON KILLED BY TRAIN

John M. Thompson, Startled by Whistle, Leaps From Safety on Siding to Tracks.

Confused by the approach of a speeding passenger train, John Marion Thompson, 20-year-old sophomore student at Park College and son of the Rev. John M. Thompson of the McCausland Avenue Presbyterian Church, leaped from a siding into the path of the locomotive on the main track about a mile south of Parkville, Mo., at 2:30 p. m. yesterday, and was instantly killed.

According to information received at the Thompson home, 1027A Forest avenue, the youth was walking along a little-used sidetrack on the Burlington right-of-way when he was startled by the whistle of a locomotive on the main track. Apparently, before observing upon which track it was approaching, he leaped from safety directly into its path. His body was hurled 40 feet by the impact.

The Rev. Mr. Thompson departed for Kansas City, where his son's body was taken, last night. The youth's mother is prostrated. Services will be held at Park College today and the body will be shipped to St. Louis for further services at his father's church, 1517 McCausland avenue.

MEXICANS FORCE AMERICAN MANAGER TO LEAVE RANCH

He Complains to Ambassador That Armed Agrarians Threatened to Ambush Him.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—George Camp, an American citizen, has lodged complaint with United States Ambassador Shield that a band of 15 armed agrarians several times attempted to ambush him, and that in consequence of attempts against his life he had been forced to abandon the San Pedro Coxtocan hacienda, located in the Huejotzingo district of the State of Puebla. Camp is the administrator of the hacienda.

Camp reported to the Ambassador that the ambuscades and threats of shooting both himself and the superintendent of the Hacienda Trinidad-Madrid were followed by the forcible seizure of large parts of the hacienda in violation of the agrarian laws. He said the confiscated fields bear crops of wheat almost ready for harvest.

With 450 acres taken last year by villagers of Tianguismanalco, 400 just occupied by agrarians from the village of Calpulalpan, and 1400 acres which residents of the village of Mayotzingo announced they would seize, the embassy was informed that the greater part of the hacienda, consisting of 2800 acres, had passed from the hands of its owners.

The hacienda San Pedro Coxtocan formerly was owned by Mrs. Rosalie Evans, an American woman, the wife of a British subject, who was killed in an ambush Aug. 2, 1924, near the ranch. The property, under the will of Mrs. Evans, passed to her sister, Mrs. W. J. Pettus, wife of Dr. W. J. Pettus, former assistant Surgeon-General of the United States. The home of Mrs. Pettus is San Francisco.

Action Brought by His Sister, Who Charges He Was Unduly Influenced by His Wife.

A suit to set aside the will of John T. Hughes, who died at his home, 3935A St. Louis avenue, Jan. 9, 1924, leaving the bulk of his $40,000 estate to his widow, Mrs. Louise W. Hughes, went to trial before a jury in Circuit Judge Mix's court today.

The suit was brought by Hughes' sister, Mrs. Anna B. Bauman of St. Genevieve County, Mo., who alleges her brother's wife used undue influence in getting him to make his will several hours before his death. Mrs. Bauman was left $5 under the will, and her two sons $100 each. Mrs. Bauman said she did not know of her brother's marriage until after his death. She testified Hughes inherited a part of the estate from their mother.

Mrs. Hughes testified she and Hughes were married in December, 1922. She had been married previously, she said, and has several children from the first marriage. She denied influencing her husband in making his will.

One-Acre Burial Plot for Coolidge.

By the Associated Press.

LANCASTER, O., March 4.—With President Coolidge's inauguration he becomes the owner of a one-acre tract of land lying west of the city, which he may use for his burial ground only. According to court records here, this tract, known as the "President's Acre," was deeded 100 years ago to President Andrew Jackson and his successors in office, to be used as their burial ground. The donor died in 1833, after planting the tract with locust trees and cedar of Lebanon, brought from the Holy Land. They were destroyed in a tornado here years ago.

BOBBED HAIR NEW—WHO SAYS SO?

By ELISABETH SMITH

THE Ladies' Auxiliary of the Samson Society of Shorn Locks increases in such numbers that newspaper reports from Paris state that out of 150 coiffures dressed in the most exclusive hairdressing salons there, only 15 had long hair. That great genius of the French bob, Antoine, says there is nothing in the rumor circulated a few months ago that the bob is going out.

It appears that the woman who goes in for the Sutherland Sisters' style of coiffure is as out of date as the masculine mustache cup. And yet——

It was the preacher, Ecclesiastes, who said that there was no new thing under the sun. Nor is the bob-haired woman a new thing, although the publicity that has accompanied her abbreviated coiffure in recent years would lead one to think so.

Our life is indeed a sleep and a forgetting, and most of us have forgotten that even in the stronghold of Victorianism bobbed hair was in vogue and widely accepted by the feminine sex.

Shingles and bobs were the crowning glory of the hoop-skirted young women who moved sedately against the background of whatnots, wax flowers and lambrequins of the 1860's. The buttressed magnitude of the ladies of the Gen. Grant period of the 1880's shingled and bobbed their heads when they wished, and they wished often. No one cried that they were hurling a javelin at convention when they did so and no newspaper articles were printed concerning their style of coiffure. Those days of armchair respectability accepted calmly a style which has later caused a furor.

The bob of 1860 more nearly resembled the modern bob than did that of 1880. The hair was worn straight and parted in the middle. The forehead was not covered, but the front hair was left a little long and hung down on either side in a manner that recalls pictures of college men's glee clubs that were taken around 1900. The bob was similar to the boyish bob worn today.

Among the writer's acquaintances is an elderly woman with snow-white hair. She recalls with a smile the days of the late '60s when she donned her wedding veil over shorn tresses. Her hair had been out when she was 12 years old and she had never let it grow again. Her oldest child was four years old before the young matron put a hairpin in her head for the first time.

"Why all this fuss about short hair now?" testily asks an old gentleman of 90. For many years he was a Judge on the bench, and was noted for his antifeminist views. No woman seeking a divorce wanted her case tried before him if she could avoid it. Yet the venerable Judge, who has decried woman in all her activities, sees no reason why bobbed hair today should evoke comment, nor why she should not bob it if she wishes. He says that in his youth he "beaued" short-haired girls and thinks bobbed hair a sane and sensible fashion.

The short hair of the '80s was a more elaborate affair. The hair was not cut as closely as in the '60s, but was cut to a length of about three inches and then curled. The marcel was not known, but ringlets were in high favor. Only an occasional straight cut was seen. No woman would have thought of going to a barber shop to have her hair cut. The operation was performed in beauty parlors or at home. They had the former even in those days, although they were very primitive affairs.

A woman over 50 recalls many a hairdressing scene of her girlhood at a fashionable boarding school. Trips to the city were not frequent and the girls would curl each other's ringlets.

"I can see Mary curling Delia's hair," she says. "No one else could get Delia's ringlets exactly right and Delia knew it. Mary would curl but one place in the middle of the back of Delia's head and then she would have her at her mercy. Whatever it happened that Mary wanted of Delia, she would not curl that one place until Delia had promised it to her."

Will history repeat itself and will long hair bring back puffs and coronet braids and Grecian knots? Time alone will tell. Popular opinion, however, seems to think that short hair for women is here to stay.

One stitch in nine saves time is her modern rendition of the old saw, and no hairpins where once were several times nine saves innumerable hours for her each week. Prossy of "Candida" may have had time to comb her long locks before she took up her typing each morning, but the modern Miss cannot be bothered with such a long process.

It is within the last two years that the last barriers against bobbed hair in business have been removed. Says Mrs. Margaret Hunter in an article in the Beauty Magazine:

"One of the largest banking houses in New York City until recently placed a ban on bobbed-haired girls for any position, including that of page. Whenever its personnel manager came to me for help I had to finecomb the city to find him girls with long hair. Now the ban has been lifted and with it bobbed hair has scored a great victory.

"Opposition to bobbed hair is usually merely a personal prejudice formed without reason. As such it must be respected by the girl or woman if she happens to be after a particular position with an employer who holds this prejudiced view. She will find great joy, however, in knowing that every day prejudice against her cherished bobs disminishes as bobbed hair comes into universal favor."

The tocsin was sounded for long-haired women, we believe, in a recent advertisement of a department store. "Hats for women whose hair is not bobbed," it read.

"A very special service in large head size at a very special price."

The long-haired woman who read it recalled advertisements for stylish stouts and groaned. She is now in the minority class and must be especially catered to, just as is the stout woman or the man with a short leg who has to wear a shoe with a built-up sole.

"The Able McLaughlins" by MARGARET WILSON

INSTALLMENT TWENTY-NINE

"YES! And as I was coming home guess whom I met, Wully! Our esteemed kinsman, Peter Keith! I stopped in at O'Brien's and there he was, drinking away as usual. Wasn't that interesting, now, for us? And Aunt Libby was going about all day as usual, asking if anyone had seen her poor, sick blessed laddie. I brought him as far home as the McTaggerts' corner. Maybe auntie will lapse into sanity now, comparative sanity, at least!"

Wully had risen with John to follow him into the house, but at the sound of that name he had paused outside the door, to hide his face from his brother. John's story made him heartsick. There seemed no chance now of getting it over secretly. Peter had gone home! It didn't seem possible. He intended to defy Wully! He intended to hide behind his mother. Well, he would speedily find that no woman's skirts could save him now from his deserts. He feigned a natural interest, and tarried outside till he heard John going up the stairs. Then he came in from the rain and sat down. That room, that home of theirs, all spoiled, all defiled. Their table, their chairs, their clock, all the things that they had bought and enjoyed together, seemed alien and sinister. He gave a look around all the little room wonderingly, and then it all faded from his thought. He laid his arms on the table and buried his face in them, as if he was weeping. But he was not weeping. Until almost morning he sat that way, scarcely moving, not heeding the sharp breaking of the thunder. He was planning ghastly things. Chirstie called to him sometimes, and he answered. She called to him at length wearily to come to bed.

To take his place beside her! Oh, God!

She was his wife, and he hadn't been able to defend her. But morning was coming. The new day's light would make things right.

"You go on with the corn," Wully said to John at breakfast. "I'm taking Chirstie over to mother's." John made no comment. Chirstie looked as if she had had fever unusually severe the day before, and naturally she would be better cared for at the McLaughlins'. John suspected nothing. He wasn't especially observant. Talking still of the celebration, he didn't see Wully watching his wife, covertly watching the way her eyes turned hauntedly toward any slight sound out of doors. Wully went through with the prayers as usual. "Prosper us in our duties this day!" he implored, with unaccustomed fervency. John went away to his work. Chirstie and the baby got into the wagon, where Wully had slyly hidden his gun—he had to conceal his sterner purpose from her. He said to her simply that he had made Peter get out once, and he could do it again. He saw no use in saying how much more thoroughly he intended doing it this time.

They scarcely spoke, riding away together, man and wife. Sitting there so close to him, she seemed so dear . . . so dear . . . and life so precious. . . . Why should he have to endanger it now just when he was beginning to appreciate it, for the sake of that man's villainy! The poignant silence struggled and surged about them, his rage, her fear, their love fighting together with no relief in expression, her beseeching, warning eyes searching the face he tried to keep averted.

No one at his mother's had heard of Peter's return. That was proved by the fact that no one began talking about it. Chirstie had had fever the day before, Wully announced to them shortly. He was worried about her. He had to go over to the store, and he thought she had better be left where she could have some care. He said he and John could "bach it" a few days. She spoke up sharply and demanded that he come for her by evening at least. He had to promise that much, to keep her from exciting suspicion. It was plain she meant to make no denial. Her eyes implored him to be careful.

Lightened of his encumbrances, he drove away. He was praying that circumstances might be made to serve him, so that he could get his task over secretly. If not, then Peter would find that no woman could help him now! He drove straight along toward his aunt's, grimly, not having to nurse his wrath, having only to restrain it. He wasn't made for anger, as he knew. It had even as a little boy always made him ill. It had exhausted him now. He felt limp. And he must be strong and calm for what was coming. He let his horses take their own gait. The heat of the sun, after the rain of the night, was making the country one great steam bath. He wiped the sweat from his forehead.

He came to the McTaggerts' corner. John had seen that man so far home the night before. If John had known then all that story, what a chance he would have had. Thank God he hadn't known! But when he did know, today, now, in a few hours, he would stand by Wully with what a sincere strength! Of course John couldn't be expected to stay and look after the farm while Wully was taken—where? Maybe Andy would do that. And Chirstie would have to stay at his mothers' until—what? His happiness was scarcely more than a sickening faint memory. He could do what he had to do. The McLaughlins could always do that. And do it well!

He could see the little Keith house now. He drove on towards it. There was no one working in the hayfield. There was no one hoeing corn. No sign of life but a tethered colt in the path. He drove up, and got out of the wagon. He tied his steaming horses to the barn. He hadn't taken his gun into his hands yet, when the door opened, and his aunt came out.

She was ready for some work in the garden apparently. She wore a kind of sunbonnet made by sewing a ruffle of old calico part way round a man's old cap, to protect her neck from the sun. She saw Wully, and her face lightened with a greeting.

"Is it you, Wully!" she exclaimed. "And how's Chirstie the day? We missed you yesterday. She had too much fever, I doubt"—

"She's better. She's at mother's. Where's everybody?"

"Your uncle's at the McNairs'."

Trying to hide that skunk, was, she?

"I want to see Peter."

"What Peter?" she asked with a start.

"Your Peter!"

"My Peter!"

"Yes!" She needn't think she could work that!

"Did you think he was here, Wully?" she asked, hurt.

"John saw him last night," he cried accusingly.

"What John?"

"Our John! He saw him last night!"

"Saw who?"

"Saw your Peter!" Could it be—"Saw my Peter!"

"He came home with him last night as far as the McTaggerts'!"

"Last night!"

"Yes!"

"With my Peter!"

"Yes!" stammered Wully.

Peter had never got home. There was no doubt about that.

Libby Keith was standing transfixed there. Her gray face began working.

"He's destroyed! He never got to me!"

She started and ran past Wully in the path, and had climbed into his wagon before he could stop her. She gave his hitched horses such a slap with the lines that they plunged strongly. He sprang to get them before they broke away. He jumped to his place and seized the lines.

"You can't go with me!" he shouted at her. He couldn't throw her out of the wagon, and the horses were all he could manage, thanks to her excitement. As if in obedience to the thoughts of the humans behind them, they were racing down the path toward the McCreaths', over which Wully had just come.

"You can't come with me!" he cried again.

She never heeded him.

The New Scarfs

IT is right smart to wear a scarf with the evening dress. The latest acquisitions are of tulle and silk net. The shops are showing these soft, filmy scarfs in charming effects, those in the fashionable ombre being prominent. The shadings from the dark to the light tones are beautifully brought out in these diaphanous scarfs.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Old Rubbers.

When giving away the children's outgrown shoes, don't forget to include their outgrown rubbers. The old rubbers rarely fit the new shoes and will prove a joy to the mother receiving the shoes.

Care of the Mop.

The best way to get the dirt out of the oiled mop is to brush it with a whisk broom kept just for this purpose. The mop will keep clean an amazing length of time if brushed out after each using.

The Kitchen Waste-Paper Basket.

A fireproof waste basket kept under the kitchen sink for wrappings, empty boxes, cans, etc., will save many trips to the cellar and keep all your kitchen rubbish in one place. The white enameled ones are nice, as they can be washed when necessary.

A Light in the Darkness.

If you have a light in your home that has no switch connection, but just a pull chain, purchase one of the chains that ends in a knob made of phosphorescent material, which is easily seen in the dark. They are not expensive and certainly do away with that search in the dark for the pull chain.

"to Dog" or not to Dog Your Hand

ANYONE who plays the great Chinese game knows the importance, in playing a hand, of setting a policy and then seeing it through. Haphazard, hit or miss play doesn't win the big prizes in Mah Jong, or in the still greater game of life.

And what a game life really is! What prizes and profits it holds forth to those who will learn to play it. Instead of tiles, it is played with dollars. The winners are those who realize that all dollars, like all tiles, are not alike in value.

If you want an "All-honor" hand in the game of life, plan your hand before you play it. Study the game. Get what is known as a "budget book." Its use will show you which of your dollars score the most points; and which of your tiles in the game of life to discard—which to save.

A new Budget Book, of exceptional merit, is now available at little or no cost. It is named after still another good game, the "Checker" Budget Book, and is offered through the courtesy of the Savings Department of the National Bank of Commerce, on Broadway between Olive and Pine Streets.

If you will open a growing savings account at this bank, you can get a Checker Budget Book free. Get your copy before the supply is exhausted.

With one of these books, it is an interesting and easy matter to discover where the family income is being spent—and what for. It's like keeping a diary. After a time, you'll find that some of the dollars you've discarded could have been saved to better advantage, that some of the things you've spent money for are not as essential to your happiness as others. The use of a Checker Budget Book will enable you to plan the family expenses on a scientific basis. There will be no more haphazard, hit or miss play. You will draw your tiles from the great wall with more confidence. You will discard them wisely—and you'll be a winner in the game of life.

A Queer Looking Thing

Disaster very often ends
In proving just who are our friends.
—Plunger the

"It is harmless, anyway," said Blackie the Crow as he sat on the rim of that cart wheel.

FARMER BROWN'S BOY had had a talk with Farmer Brown and now he was very busy. He was very busy indeed. Lying on the ground near the barn was an old telephone pole. Farmer Brown's Boy fastened a stout rope to one end of this, and then with a horse he dragged it—where do you think? He dragged it over as near as he could to the place where had stood the tree in which Plunger and Mrs. Plunger, the Ospreys, had had their home for several years.

Then he went back to the barn and got a big old cart wheel. This he rolled over to the same place. Then with saw and hammer and nails and braces he went to work. He fastened that cart wheel to the smaller end of that pole, and he took pains to see that it was securely fastened and braced. It took him some time. When this was finished he went back to the barn and got a shovel. Then he began digging a hole.

All this time he had been watched with the liveliest curiosity. Striped Chipmunk, Chatterer the Red Squirrel, Happy Jack Squirrel, Sammy Jay, Blacky the Crow and of course Plunger and Mrs. Plunger had watched and wondered. What was Farmer Brown's Boy doing?

"I never did," replied Happy Jack. "I wonder what it is for. I wonder why he has brought it way over here to the edge of the Green Forest."

Sammy Jay and Blacky the Crow kept their tongues still, but their eyes were very busy. They were full of curiosity. As you know there are no smarter people in all the Green Forest than these two. Both pride themselves on knowing all about these two-legged creatures called men. Both pride themselves on knowing all about the queer things that men build and use. But here was something they had never seen. They couldn't even guess what it could be for. And because they couldn't guess what it could be for they were rather suspicious of it.

When at last Farmer Brown's Boy stopped digging he had a deep hole. That hole puzzled the hidden watchers quite as much as did the queer thing he had made. All of them had a look at it while Farmer Brown's Boy was back at the house. Presently he returned and with him was Farmer Brown. They brought ropes and pullies.

Farmer Brown's Boy climbed a stout tree and high up fastened a pully. Th he ran a stout rope. O this was fastened to the ground. [SOLU]TION OF [YES]TERDAY'S PUZZLE

TODAY'S PUZZLE

Each white space is to receive one letter only. Words start only in numbered squares.

A Beauty Bath for Your Health and Complexion

By LUCREZIA BORI, the Famous Spanish Prima Donna

THE bath is one of the most beneficial and effective of beauty aids. It does much to keep the body in good health by making it scrupulously clean and by keeping germ pores in a perfectly healthy, unclogged condition.

The bath also helps keep your complexion as soft and fine as you would have it.

LUCREZIA BORI

The steam arising from a warm bath serves to open the pores of your face, which is excellent for it. Later, when You have finished your bath, you should rinse your face again and again with clear, sparkling cold water. This will close up the opened pores and help tone the muscles of your face.

Now I am going to tell you of an excellent bath to rest and soothe your nerves and to beautify your skin.

First of all, you draw a bath of warm water—say, about 48 degrees Fahrenheit. Then you make the water very soapy by taking your cake of pure bath soap in your hand and dashing it about briskly in the tub of water for several minutes. Before you step into the bath lather yourself with the warm water, applying it with a fine soft sponge.

Stay in this delightful bath about 5 minutes. You will doubtless want to linger longer than this, but 5 minutes is quite enough. A longer period might make you feel weak, and a bath which is taken to promote health and beauty should have no debilitating after-effects.

After your 5 minutes are up, empty the tub and refill it with tepid water, into which you may put the following solution, which you should have at hand:

Tincture of benzoin....200 grams
Tincture of red roses...200 grams

Step into this second bath and stay there 10 minutes. You can allow yourself this longer period of time because a tepid bath is not so weakening as a warm bath.

After this, you should dry yourself with soft, warm towels. If you have the heat turned on, you can put your towels on the radiator when you begin your bath and they will be pleasantly warm when you are ready to use them.

Now here is an excellent astringent which I recommend for rubbing over your body after this second bath:

Alum .... 10 grams
Spirits of verbena .....200 grams
Cologne water .....300 grams

This astringent acts as a good tonic. It tones your skin by closing the pores. It imparts strength and vitality, and the rubbing motion which you use in applying the tonic is also very good for your skin.

Some women prefer to apply this tonic with a toilet glove. You can purchase one of them at your druggist's and you will find its use very helpful in building up your bodily strength, vitality and beauty.

RUNNING INTO THE HIGH FIGURES.

IT is reliably reported that during the latest World's Series a ing Englishman halted in front of a bulletin board where the was being reported. At the top of the board was displayed the following table:

Senators—2001101

With a rather dazed expression on his face the Englishman m along. Two blocks down the street he encountered an American quaintance.

GRIMM AND HALL IN VERBAL TILT BEFORE WOMEN

Former Is Asked if He Didn't Confer With President of U. R. Before Deciding to Run.

MEETING ADJOURNED DURING ARGUMENT

Questioned About Koeln's Support, Grimm Replies: "You Were in His Lap All Summer."

J. Hugo Grimm, former Circuit Judge, and Circuit Judge Hall hurled questions and retorts at each other at the conclusion of addresses by mayoralty candidates at a League of Women Voters' luncheon at the American Annex Hotel today. Grimm and Hall are two of the Republican candidates. Mrs. Roscoe Anderson, presiding at the meeting, who is a Democrat, stopped the recrimination and adjourned the meeting.

Grimm, speaking first, had stepped on Hall's toes by belittling a suggestion by Hall for the electrification of locomotives to reduce the smoke evil. Judge Hall, at the close of his address, said: "Now I want to ask my friend, Judge Grimm, a few questions. Judge is it not a fact that you met with A. L. Shapleigh, president of the United Railways, at the American Hotel, before you decided to run for Mayor?"

"Not at the American Hotel or any other place," Grimm shot back, visibly angered.

Asked About Koeln.

"About Ed Koeln," Hall continued, "did you not meet"——

"I've met Koeln several times," Grimm cut in. "You know you have personally solicited his support. Is that not a fact?"

"It is not. One of his men called me up and I called Koeln, who said for me to come to his house and see him. I had not seen him before that since the November election. He told me you were around sitting on his lap all summer."

"I want to call the attention of the ladies"—Grimm speaking now —"to one thing. Judge Hall is running for Mayor and occupying his seat on the Circuit bench. I have resigned from mine."

Then Mrs. Anderson cut in. "Here, here, gentlemen. We asked the mayoralty candidates to come here to discuss their views on certain questions and not to ask each other questions."

Hall was not content. "Let me answer that last one," he begged. But Mrs. Anderson said: "No. Judge Hall has asked questions and received answers. There'll be no further interrogation. The meeting stands adjourned."

Kiwanis Club Addressed.

Candidates for Mayor addressed two luncheons at the same hotel today, that of the Kiwanis Club as well as of the women's organization. All candidates were invited to the Kiwanis meeting, but the women heard only Hall, Grimm and George E. Dieckman, Republicans, and James W. Byrnes and T. J. Cavanaugh, Democrats, having heard others previously.

The subjects discussed ranged from a summary of the coal freight rates to St. Louis from Illinois mines by Louis P. Aloe to a discussion by George E. Dieckman of the amount of money being spent to "buy the City Hall." Dieckman did not name any candidate in his general charge.

Victor J. Miller discussed the power of the Mayor in enforcing the law and Grimm spoke of campaign promises and the importance of reviewing the records of candidates.

In his address Aloe pointed out that St. Louis pays 21 cents per ton more for coal shipped from a 20-mile radius of East St. Louis than East St. Louis does. He said this was exclusive of arbitrary and other charges and was applied merely because the destination of the coal was beyond a state line. St. Louis, he added, received 7,000,000 tons annually from Illinois mines and the extra charge per ton made St. Louisans pay $1,470,000 annually more than East St. Louis would pay for the same coal.

Suggests a Remedy.

The remedy, he said, might be found in co-operation by the city government with the traffic departments of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Exchange to prevent the rates set by public service commissions within their respective states from accomplishing the result of fostering their own industries at the expense of others inside the state.
